Sign of Weakness Feared by Pittman

Fight Splits Old Blocs; Fish Asks Basis of Parity for Nippon.

By Sidney Olson.

The two men who interpret the Administration's foreign policy to Congress separately condemned as "futile" yesterday a joint resolution asking the President to call a naval disarmament conference.

Chairman Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, made his statement after a visit to the President.

Chairman Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters that such a conference "would indicate weakness on the part of the United States."

Speaking gravely, Pittman, who earlier had obtained a 10-day leave of absence from the Senate to attend a power conference in Nevada, said:

"The very discussion of such an obviously futile effort would be misinterpreted by Japan and would probably make our resistance to her illegal acts much more difficult."

Won't Fight, Says Student.

Meanwhile further indications multiplied that Congressional conservative and liberal lines are ignored in the split over American foreign policy. The resolution asking the President to seek a conference of world powers was introduced in the Senate by a bitter anti-New Dealer, Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, and in the House by Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, ardent liberal.

As tension over the chaotic foreign situation continued, outstanding developments included:

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York, told the House Naval Affairs Committee that a naval disarmament conference should be called to grant Japan naval parity with the United States.

A 20-year-old Iowa theological student, Frank Littell, social action chairman of the National Council of Methodist Youth, told the committee he would not fight, even in defensive war, even to protect his mother and sisters from foreign invaders.

First Lady Calls for Arms.

Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, U. S. N., reiterated to a New York luncheon meeting the United States is in danger "of becoming the Ethiopia or China of the Western Hemisphere," and called for an end of "pacifist" attempts to halt the Roosevelt big-navy program.

Representative William I. Sirovich (Democrat), of New York, in a speech repeatedly applauded by the House, warned that victory for the insurgents in Spain would leave the United States "the sole remaining democracy in the world and pave the way for our destruction."

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told her press conference that the United States needs bigger and

Alcatraz—An Inmate's Story

Alcatraz Cell Means 'Death' to Criminals, Former Inmate Says

Silent System Whips Most Bold and Ruthless Law-Breakers Into Realization That They Will Never Leave 'the Rock.'

[The Post presents this story by a former inmate of Alcatraz Prison at its face value with no idea of criticism of the Department of Justice or any official of the island prison. This is the third story in a series.—Editor's note.]

By William Malcolm Ritchey,
former Alcatraz prisoner, as told to Howard F. Wentworth.
Copyright, 1938, by The Washington Post.

THEY don't pull any punches in Alcatraz. That's why the place is feared and hated by every law-breaker who ever heard of it.

I guess they've got to be tough to keep things in hand—but the toughest man is no tougher than the system.

No matter how heartless or ruthless the "big shot" racketeers seemed when you read about them in the newspapers, they turn out to be just ordinary human beings when you meet them face to face like I did in Alcatraz—and Alcatraz is no place for human beings.

I began to realize that my first day in isolation. Each prisoner, when he reaches the island, is placed in solitary confinement for 30 days. There, during routine fingerprinting, photographing, physical examinations, etc., he is taught the prison regulations and how to obey them.

Makes First Mistake.

When I was placed in an isolation cell I made my first mistake. I spoke to another prisoner in an adjoining cell. Although I couldn't see him because of a steel partition, I called across and asked him where he was from.

I had hardly opened my mouth when two guards were at the door. One of them reached through the bars and grabbed me.

"Listen, you," he snarled, "get this and get it straight. From now on you keep your mouth shut. You'll talk only when told to do so."

I guess the other fellow had been there for a couple of days, because he didn't answer me and even when the guards left didn't offer to continue the conversation.

The "silent system," I soon was to learn, is the main reason why men go mad—why they prefer suicide to a life of muteness. It's even getting the guards. They are a pretty decent bunch of men, but they can't "take it" either. There isn't one among them who wouldn't welcome a transfer to some other institution.

Choose Firing Squad.

After I was taken out of isolation and permitted to eat and mingle with other prisoners, I found that the long-term men have accepted their sentences as death penalties. They are convinced they will die in Alcatraz—that self-destruction or the system will end their days. I'll bet on the system.

While I was there two men picked the "easy way" out—Jimmy Lucas and Joe Bowers, a couple of the toughest criminals to hit the

Nichols Group Flouts Pleas, Bars Sales Tax

Chairman Sarcastic Over Commission Men's Testimony.

By James D. Secrest.

A flat statement that Congress would not enact a sales tax for the District even if the House District Committee were to recommend it was the response yesterday of the Nichols sub-committee to suggestions of local businessmen that the business privilege levy be scrapped.

The sub-committee gave practically no encouragement to business organization spokesmen as public hearings were opened on the three-point tax bill.

Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, became sarcastic when a representative of commission merchants asked that they be permitted to deduct losses before paying any taxes at all, no matter how come.

"If you fellows are really operating on such a small margin of profit as you say," he said, "it seems to me you won't be able to

Gale Thwarts Air Rescue of Party on Floe

Icebreaker Stalled 20 Miles From Soviet Base; Two Other Ships Near.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 14.—Fliers aboard the ice breaker Taimyr were forced by an Arctic storm tonight to abandon an aerial attempt to rescue four Russian scientists on a drifting ice floe off Greenland.

Two planes which had been assembled for the flight were dismantled and placed back on the Taimyr when a strong southwest wind blew up in the afternoon, shifting the ice on which the makeshift flying field was situated.

The rescuers, previously brought to a standstill by the heavy ice, radioed they would attempt to push their vessel nearer the four scientists, who were about 20 miles away.

Visual signalling was again resorted to during the afternoon when the polar campers lighted a fire at the request of the Taimyr, which reported the signal had been seen clearly.

Ivan Papanin, commander of the scientists, who have been drifting southward since they established a camp near the North Pole last May 21, reported the position of the floe as 1.22 north latitude, 20 west longitude, showing a slight drift to the southeast since the last report.

The ice breaker Murman messaged that she was only a few hours from the Taimyr. The Yermak, with Dr. Otto J. Schmidt, chief of the rescue forces, aboard, was in the Baltic Sea in constant contact with the Taimyr.

Break Close in Limerick Case; Trail Leads Near Langdon Jail

The murder of jazz-mad Beulah Limerick, the "whoopee girl," appeared near solution last night, seven years after she was found shot to death in her eerie home in Southeast Washington.

It was learned ace detectives of Washington's Homicide Squad were in New Haven, Conn., working on the case. Robert F. Langdon, the cop on the beat, who ordered Beulah to move out of the house, has been in custody at nearby East Haven since April, 1937, on a charge of placing an obstruction on the tracks of the New Haven Railroad.

Langdon flagged the Merchant's Limited the night of March 28, 1937, in time to prevent the express passing over a heavy chain bolted to the track. Held under $15,000 bond, his first jury failed to agree and he was held for a second trial.

The Limerick case was reopened December 22, 1937, by the questioning in New York of Mrs. Rose V. Langdon, 37, the former policeman's wife. Brought to Washington by Lieut. Floyd Truscott, she was questioned and released. Since her release, she has kept in contact with the police.

Soon after Mrs. Langdon's release, police announced they were looking for a man witness in the case. They predicted he would be found in a "few weeks."

Senate Votes Crop Control By 56 to 31

53 Democrats, Frazier, Capper and Norris Answer 'Aye.'

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's $550,000,000 farm bill, carrying surplus control of five major commodities through a system of acreage and marketing restrictions, yesterday was approved by the Senate by a 56-to-31 vote.

Key to the President's legislative program since November 15, the ambitious measure goes to the White House for signature after three months of constant revision and controversy.

The bitter fight on the bill continued up to the final vote. In a last-minute bi-partisan onslaught, the program was denounced as "revolutionary," a "sugar-coated pill" to subject farmers to compulsion and "the beginning of the end of this kind of government."

Both Sides Attack.

Half a dozen Senators on both sides of the aisle joined in the assault. They were answered by Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley. He called it "the best farm bill ever enacted by the Congress to deal with a great problem of American life."

The final vote was on a conference report compromising differences in widely conflicting House and Senate farm bills. Approval was presaged last week when the Senate refused by a 48-to-31 vote to return it to conference for further change. The House had approved the report early last week.

Fifty-three Democrats, 2 Republicans and 1 Independent voted for passage, while 17 Democrats, 11 Republicans, 2 Farmer-Laborites and 1 Progressive voted "No."

Broader Than AAA.

More far-reaching than the invalidated agriculture adjustment act of the early New Deal, the bill undertakes to "balance" production of cotton, wheat, corn, tobacco and rice.

On the basis of the existing soil conservation law, a complicated system of control would be built up. Soil benefit payments would be continued and commodity loans and "parity" payments would be made as inducements to farm "co-operators."

Parity payments would be conditioned on funds available, but farm leaders will offer a processing tax rider on the 1938 revenue bill to provide necessary amounts. Penalty-enforced marketing quotas would be proclaimed by the Secretary of Agriculture when production passed surplus points. It would take two-thirds approval of farmers to enforce them.

Granary Plan Omitted.

Specific provision for Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's "ever-normal granary" program was omitted from the final draft of the measure. Experts said the Administration still may make use of the principle if it wishes, under loan and storage provisions of the bill.

Joining in the parting chorus of criticism were Senators William G. McAdoo, of California, and Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska (Democrats); Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary, Senator William E. Borah,

75 Sponsor Tax In House to Kill Chain Stores

Back Patman Bill to Penalize Owners of Over 9 Concerns.

Seventy-five members of the House signed their names as co-authors of a bill introduced yesterday by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, "frankly designed to tax chain stores out of existence."

Patman, who thus described the bill, termed it a measure "to regulate selfishness and prevent greed," and claimed at least 150 votes in the House for the bill.

Under the measure, chains of nine stores or less would be exempt from taxation. A heavy excise tax would be slapped on chain stores from the tenth store up in graduated degree. From 9 to 15 stores the tax will be $50 a store. For each store not in excess of 25 $100 a store would be levied, and the scale thereafter climbs to $1,000

U.S. Modifies Sterilization Gold Policy

Morgenthau Announces Stand for 'Psychological Purposes.'

$1,227,000,000 Now Inactive Unaffected by Declaration.

By Franklyn Waltman.

In a move designed chiefly for its psychological effect, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau yesterday announced a substantial modification of the Administration's gold sterilization policy, retroactive as of January 1.

The only gold acquisitions this year which will go into the Treasury's "Inactive Gold Account" or sterilized fund will be those amounts in excess of $100,000,000 in each quarter of the year. Since the inflow of gold is now at a rate less than $100,000,000 quarterly, the action for all practical purposes constituted an abandonment of the sterilization policy.

Present Fund Unaffected.

Approximately $30,000,000 of gold accumulated since January 1 and ear-marked for sterilization will be released and now will be placed in the Treasury's regular gold fund. None of the gold now in the sterilized fund, totaling approximately $1,227,000,000, will be affected by the new decision.

Although the Treasury's action has an inflationary element, its first tangible effect is expected to be confined to taking some of the pressure off the public debt. Under the sterilization plan the Treasury borrowed from the money market through sale of short-term securities amounts equal to its gold acquisitions. This contributed to the public debt which yesterday reached the all-time high of $37,576,727,712.

The Treasury action also will have the effect of expanding the credit base of the banks with a probable addition to their excess reserves. This is regarded as a move toward assuring a continuance of "easy money" conditions in the country. There has not been, however, any tightening up of money conditions during the current recession. Excess reserves now total approximately $1,200,000,000.

Thus American banks now have $1,200,000,000 of idle money to lend. The maximum addition to this credit base under the Treasury action would be $400,000,000 during the next year. Thus the Treasury action is not expected to have any immediate marked effect on credit conditions.

"Mild Lift" Noted.

Nevertheless the move is expected to have a psychological effect. All security markets, except San Francisco, were closed when Secretary Morgenthau made his announcement. The Associated Press reported that the announcement "gave a mild lift to Western stocks in late trading" on the San Francisco exchange. The gains were slight, however.

The importance of the Treasury announcement was that it was intended as an act of appeasement toward Capitol Hill advocates of further monetary experimentation and inflationary moves. Since the development of the recession the so-called "inflation bloc" in the Senate again has become active. Only last week the Senate Agriculture Committee approved a resolution calling on the Administration to use its authority over money to increase commodity prices to the 1926 level.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, regarded as the leader of the "inflation bloc," praised the Treasury action as "the first step in the right direction" but he held that "it does not go far enough." He asserted that something should be done regarding the $1,227,000,000 of gold already sterilized.

"I only regret that they have not done that before and have not re-

Adm. Grayson, Red Cross Head, Dies Here at 59

ADMIRAL CARY T. GRAYSON,

President Visits Home During Day

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross and physician to three Presidents, died at 12:50 o'clock this morning at his home, 3325 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Physican, friend and confidant of Presidents, the man who attended Woodrow Wilson through his last long illness had suffered long from anemia, which recently became complicated by a serious bronchial infection. Three weeks ago, during a visit to the South, he contracted a severe cold.

Admiral Grayson was 59 years old and had been in poor health about two years, and during that time occasionally has been forced to remain away from his desk.

Yesterday afternoon President Roosevelt, informed of the gravity of the admiral's condition—emphasized in a bedside bulletin from his physician, Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, at midnight—interrupted a brief motor trip to call at the Grayson home, where he left his card.

One of Admiral Grayson's sons, Cary Grayson, jr., was rushing to his father's bedside from London, England, where he had stopped en route home from a Museum of Natural History expedition to Africa. Two other sons were attending Admiral Grayson with Mrs. Grayson last night. They are Gordon, a student at Yale University, and William, who goes to St. Alban's School here.

Dr. Thomas R. Brown, Baltimore specialist, returned to Baltimore last night after consulting with Dr. Bloedorn on the admiral's condition.

George M. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Bernard M. Baruch, both close friends of Admiral Grayson, joined the family group at the bedside last night.

A Virginia Gentleman.

Rear Admiral Cary Travers Grayson, U. S. N., retired, was a Virginia gentleman. That explained more than anything else the extraordinary thing that happened to him when he was a young naval surgeon, fresh from a cruise around the world. It explained why, instead of continuing a career in the sick bays of the fleet, he became the physician, friend and confidante of three American Presidents, and consequently an historical figure in his own right.

Being a Virginian and a patrician, Grayson naturally was a horseman. That created a bond between him and President Theodore Roosevelt, hard-riding apostle of the strenuous life. T. R. made the young lieutenant, then attached to the Presidential yacht Mayflower, a White House physician. William Howard Taft continued him in the role, and so did the next occupant of the White House, Woodrow Wilson.

Had Part in Wilson Drama.

As physician to Wilson Admiral Grayson played a major role in the drama that engulfe dthe war President and finally broke him. Unknown to Wilson before 1913, Grayson became his closest friend. A benign shadow, he looked after Wilson's health before and during the World War, then accompanied him on his two trips to Europe after the war.

In the Old World he met kings, princes and prime ministers. He slept in Buckingham Palace. Wherever he went the broad-shouldered little man with the shaggy brows and gentle eyes left the impress of

Farley Quotes Aiken in Reply To Vandenberg

Twits Senator on Seeking 'Coalition That Will Not Coalesce.'

Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, who, in a Lincoln's birthday speech before the famous Middlesex Club at Boston, advocated a coalition plan for the Republican Party was accused yesterday by Postmaster General James A. Farley in his capacity as chairman of the Democratic National Committee of favoring "a coalition that will not coalesce."

"As a fellow politician," said Farley's statement, "I naturally understand the Senator's desire for such a coalition as he visualizes but I cannot overlook the difficulty of a coalition that will not coalesce. All the Senator has to do to realize his ambition is to get enough votes for the Republican ticket to put the Republican candidate across.

"The 1938 election and the bye-elections held since then have indicated that he can get no greater number of Democrats or Progressives to think his way than thought his way in 1936."

Farley concluded his statement by saying that "without attempting to minimize the effects of Senator Vandenberg's oratorical powers, I am inclined to believe the country will give more attention to the statement of Gov. Aiken of Vermont, who said if Lincoln were alive he would 'be ashamed of his party's leadership today.'"

Judges Keep Banking Hours, Sen. King Finds in Early Visit

The working hours of the District Police Court judges and the chairman of the Senate District Committee failed to coincide yesterday, to the embarrassment of the former and the displeasure of the latter.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, made a surprise call on the judges, whom he had criticized on Saturday for laziness, and after waiting a half hour or more departed without seeing them.

Police Court was scheduled to open at 9 a. m. Senator King arrived at 8:45 o'clock and waited around until 9:20, he said.

"They told me that I was entirely too early," he remarked, "and that the judges seldom got there before 10 or 10:30."

Senator King said he would not only block any efforts to increase the number of judges, as suggested by the Commissioners, but he hinted he may try to have the salaries of the present judges reduced unless they observe longer working hours.

"Why in my State the justices of the Supreme Court get only $4,000 a year and they work hard for it, while these Police Court judges are paid $8,000 and keep banking hours," he added.

The District Committee chairman spoke favorably of an editorial in The Washington Post calling attention to the late openings and accumulated docket of Police Court.

States' Power To Limit Truck Sizes Upheld

Supreme Court Holds That Regulations Bind Interstate Trade.

Power of a State Legislature to limit the width and weight of motor trucks passing over local highways in interstate commerce yesterday was upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

The decision, awaited with interest by competing railroad and trucking interests, overruled objections by the Justice Department, and reversed lower courts which had enjoined enforcement of a South Carolina law.

Cardozo, Reed Abstain.

Speaking for seven members of the high court, Justice Stone said the South Carolina regulation, which limits gross weight of trucks to 20,000 pounds and the width to 90 inches does "not infringe the fourteenth amendment, and the resulting burden on interstate commerce is not forbidden."

Testimony before the lower courts had shown that 96 inches is the standard width of trucks engaged in interstate commerce.

Stone ruled, in effect, that the South Carolina regulation is valid in the absence of Congressional legislation determining "the extent to which, in that field, State power and local interests should be required to yield to the national authority and interest."

"Congress," said Stone, "in the exercise of its plenary power to regulate interstate commerce, may determine whether the burdens imposed on it by State regulation, otherwise permissible, are too great and may, by legislation designed to secure uniformity or in other respects to protect the national interest in the commerce, curtail to some extent the State's regulatory power."

Law in Effect Since 1920.

Stone ruled the lower court had no authority to take over legislative prerogatives by determining what "in its judgment, is the most suitable restriction to be applied of those that are possible."

The court viewed the South Carolina reguiation as a safety and economy measure the State Legislature had power to enact.

"The 90-inch limitation has been in force in South Carolina since 1920 and the concrete highways which it has built appear to be adapted to vehicles of that width," ruled Stone.

"The record shows without contradiction that the use of heavy loaded trucks on the highways tends to force other traffic off the concrete surface onto the shoulders of the road adjoining its edges and to increase repair costs materially.

"It appears also that as the width of trucks is increased it obstructs the view of the highway, causing much inconvenience and increased hazard in its use."

Intervening in the case, the Justice Department had argued the regulations "are unreasonable burden on interstate commerce in so far as they apply to traffic on the interstate system of Federal-aid highways."

Blow to Citrus Trade.

From Tallahassee, Fla., Cary D. Landis, Florida attorney general, declared the Supreme Court ruling upholding the South Carolina regulation would be a "terrible blow to the Florida citrus industry" because small truck loads do not pay the shipper.

In another case yesterday the court held in effect that a utility cannot escape liability for taxes even though the proceeds are used to pay principal and interest on bonds sold to raise funds for a competing public power plant.

The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. failed in an effort to enjoin the sale of $12,000,000 of bonds by the Sacramento Municipal Utility district for construction of a competing system. The company objected to paying a proposed tax for construction of the new system, which it said would "appropriate" the company's business.

The court granted Thomas J. Mooney 30 days in which to prepare and file a brief in support of his petition for review of a decision against him by the California Supreme Court. Mooney is seeking Supreme Court review of his conviction in connection with the Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco in 1916, for which he is serving a life sentence in San Quentin.

In another case the court upheld, 6 to 2, the Texas Railroad Commission in a rate case involving gas consumers in Laredo, Tex. Justice Black concurred in this decision, but challenged the reasoning of some of his associates and charged high salaries paid utilities officials are paid by consumers in the form of inflated rates. Dissenting from the opinion of the majority, Justices McReynolds and Butler called lower court proceedings in the case "an empty show."

Miss Grosvenor said the car in which she was riding collided with the King machine when the latter suddenly stopped in the 3600 block of Connecticut avenue northwest. She was thrown against the dash board.

Spectacular 'Secret' Mission of McNutt to Roosevelt Augurs Presidential Boom.

By Franklyn Waltman

Hail the conquering hero—the man of the hour—the savior of our country after 1940—Paul Vories McNutt, the silver-haired High Commissioner of the Philippine Islands!

WALTMAN.

He comes to us by air, braving the winter storms, across the turbulent waters of the Pacific, back from a secret Presidential mission to the Far East—a mission so secret that even Mr. Roosevelt does not know about it. He comes to be acclaimed by the multitudinous, if not so spontaneous, hordes of Democracy in Colorado, Wyoming, Indiana and Washington.

Come one, come all—indeed, since 4,000 invitations to the Washington reception to the High Commissioner are being issued, not many will be left out—and gaze upon this handsome Hoosier who believes the hour is at hand to make his bid for the Presidency! And when Paul Vories McNutt believes the hour is at hand, he acts with spectacular abandon.

Not since "Cuhnel" George Howard Earle (Governor of Pennsylvania), Southern gentleman, projected his Presidential candidacy before the Southern Society here several months ago has the country seen so determined an effort to be President Roosevelt's successor as it will see made on Mr. McNutt's behalf during the next ten days.

Indeed, the effort for Mr. McNutt will pale into insignificance the flowery oratorical attempt of "Cuhnel" Earle. Mr. McNutt's friends propose to demonstrate to "Cuhnel" Earle, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Robert H. Jackson, Jim Farley and other Presidential aspirants how professionals do this sort of thing. If you want to know how serious the McNutt boom is, talk with any of the High Commissioner's Indiana followers.

High Commissioner McNutt's Presidential aspirations have been no secret. They became known while he was still Governor of Indiana. Modesty has never been exactly a McNutt virtue. But it was not until about a month ago that the commissioner agreed to let the country have the works—to commence his build-up for the Presidency.

The stage was set with the election by the Indiana Democrats of Frank McHale to be that State's Democratic national committeeman. Mr. McHale was the manager of the McNutt campaigns for national commander of the American Legion and the Governorship of Indiana. He is Mr. McNutt's political partner. Recently Mr. McHale has been making trips around the country, meeting Democratic leaders of other States. Hoosiers like to refer to him as the "Jim Farley of Indiana."

So much for the backstage fixings. Mr. McNutt can get his own front page publicity. In the midst of the recent apprehensions over the Japanese threat, High Commissioner McNutt announced he was making a hurried trip from Manila to the Island of Mindanao in the Philippines to investigate Japanese penetration there. What he found he promised to report to the President.

Then here in Washington hints were dropped that High Commissioner McNutt would make a flying trip to China—a secret mission of great importance involving an investigation into the Far Eastern situation for President Roosevelt. In Manila the story was confirmed—not only would the High Commissioner go to Shanghai, but he would fly back to Washington to report to the President, it was said. Another front page story resulted.

Mr. Roosevelt, at a press conference, was asked about the report he was sending High Commissioner McNutt on a secret mission to China. The President said he had sent Mr. McNutt on no mission. He said the High Commissioner wished to discuss several matters with Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the Asiatic Fleet of the American Navy, and had asked permission to go to Shanghai for that purpose. Permission was given, Mr. Roosevelt said. He added that Mr. McNutt's return to this country was in the nature of a holiday visit and that he assumed the High Commissioner would drop by for a call.

Undaunted by this White House throw-down of his secret mission, High Commissioner McNutt dashed off to Shanghai, talked with Admiral Yarnell and announced he must hurry on to Washington to report to the President. He boarded the Hawaiian Clipper and is now flying over Pacific waves.

Meanwhile invitations were sent to Mr. McNutt to stop, while en route across the country, in Colorado, Wyoming and at Indianapolis to be greeted and honored by his friends. Despite his hurry to report to the President he accepted the invitations.

In Indianapolis next Saturday night he will be guest of honor at a dinner of the Indiana Democratic Editorial Association. The reservations—including those of most holders of luscious State jobs—now total about 2,300.

This organization is expected to laud High Commissioner McNutt for his great services to his country and to adopt resolutions indorsing him for the Presidency. Then Mr. McNutt will get going again. Escorted by approximately 200 Indiana Democrats—including Gov. Clifford M. Townsend, McNutt lieutenant—he will push on to Washington and, we daresay exhausted, will report to the President.

After that High Commissioner McNutt will relax. He will relax at a gorgeous reception February 23 in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, where more than 4,000 office-holding Washington Democrats and others will greet him. The invitations are being issued in the name of Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, and Mrs. Minton. But the Senator does not pretend he is paying for this party. It is just a little affair of the Indiana Democrats, he says.

Some observers here suspect that the bill will be defrayed by the Two Per Cent Club of Indiana, more formally known as the Hoosier Democratic Club. This is an unique organization. It derives its revenue from an assessment on each State employe of 2 per cent of his or her salary in lieu of any other Democratic contribution. Of course such payments are supposed to be "voluntary"—but they are about as "voluntary" as the decision of a New Deal jobholder here to buy a $100 Jackson Day Dinner ticket. He buys "or else."

The Indiana Two Per Cent Club figures in the McNutt Presidential build-up. It is whispered that his campaign is being financed out of the fund. One rumor is that the "club" has a $1,000,000 war chest. Those in a position to know say this is an exaggeration— that over the last five years the "club" has collected about $100,000 annually and that some of this money necessarily has been spent. How much is left in the fund none seems to know, however.

Some observers, as well as some Hoosiers, believe High Commissioner McNutt is getting himself out on a limb, which will be out from under him by 1940. Be that as it may, the McNutt campaign will be a gaudy, spectacular show while it lasts.

Senators Again Seek Gag Rule On Filibuster

18 Sign Petition to Cut Debate on Anti-Lynch Measure.

In a second apaprently futile effort to stop the Southern filibuster against the anti-lynching bill, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, yesterday filed in the Senate a "cloture" petition carrying 18 signatures, 2 more than the required 16.

The petition automatically will force another roll-call vote in the Senate at 1 p. m. tomorrow on Wagner's proposal to cut short debate and bring the anti-lynching bill to a vote.

A similar cloture effort, made in the Senate recently by Senator M. M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, failed.

Sponsors of the latest petition claim to have picked up several votes since then, but apparently still lack the necessary two-thirds majority.

Opponents of the anti-lynching bill meantime predicted the measure will be laid aside in favor of the Administration's emergency relief bill later this week. If the cloture move fails, as expected, a motion will be offered, probably with leadership support, to call up the relief appropriatoin as soon as it passes the House. This, it it carries, would have the effect of displacing the anti-lynching bill for the session.

The filibuster against the anti-lynching bill has continued, with brief intermissions, for nearly six weeks. Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley recently served notice that unless the bill can be brought to a vote, he will move to transact other business.

'Safety Super Highways' to Cross Country Will Be Asked by Sen. Lonergan in Bill.

A board to undertake a 20-year program of constructing transcontinental "safety super-highways" will be established in the Public Roads Bureau of the Department of Agriculture if a bill which Senator Lonergan (Democrat), of Connecticut, will introduce soon, becomes law. Senator Lonergan said yesterday his plan contemplated toll charges until the cost was liquidated.

Representative Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, introduced a bill for an $8,000,000,000 national highway construction program as a means of relieving unemployment and improving national defense. His bill is similar to one introduced last week by Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio.

Labor's Non-Partisan League yesterday asked the Senate Commerce Committee if, as reported, it had refused to hear the reply of Harry Bridges, C. I. O. vice president and former head of the West Coast longshoremen, to reverse its action. The letter of request said that "everyone who desires an improvement, rather than a worsening, in our maritime labor problems" would hope the committee would hear Bridges.

Creation of a "Circuit Court of Appeals for Patents" was recommended yesterday by the Senate Patents Committee. The bill by Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, which now goes to the Senate, establishes a five-judge tribunal to which patent litigation could be appealed directly from Federal District Courts. The only appeal from the Patents Court would be to the Supreme Court.

A plea for Federal juncture with the States to treat and control venereal diseases was made to a Senate Commerce sub-committee yesterday by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin. He urged the sub-committee to report favorably his bill to establish a division of venereal diseases in the U. S. Public Health Service.

Representative McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, received a pen yesterday. It was the one with which President Roosevelt had just signed a bill authorizing $743,000 for purchase by the Secretary of the Interior of additional lands in Tennessee to complete the Great Smoky National Park. McReynolds said he would seek an immediate appropriation to carry out the authorization.

A five-year program for the study and development of the growing of tung trees and other sources of drying oils is proposed in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia. The bill authorizes a $300,000 appropriation to establish an experiment station and $300,000 a year for five years thereafter to carry out the program. No location for the station was specified.

House Bill Frees Cincinnati Society Home of Taxation

The palatial home of the late Larz Anderson at 2118 Massachusetts avenue will be exempt from local taxation when occupied by the Society of Cincinnati, under terms of a bill passed yesterday by the House.

The bill, one of four passed during a brief District day session, aroused the temporary objection of Representative Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, independent floor leader, but this was withdrawn.

Three other bills passed in short order by the House provide for:

Amendment of the charter of the Washington College of Law to place it on a par with other higher educational institutions.

U. S. Holds Air Bombing Of Civilians Too Costly

By the Associated Press.

United States Army officials have reached the conclusion that bombing of civilian populations does not pay and will not be adopted by the American Air Corps as a weapon of future warfare.

Authoritative officers said yesterday their study of bombing operations conducted against civilian populations in Ethiopia, China and Spain showed that cost was greater than effect.

Vocation Classes Urged by Ballou As Job Solution

Vocational education was urged as a solution to unemployment and other social ills yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou. Speaking at monthly meeting of the Council of Social Agencies, at the Y. W. C. A., he said, "It is less expensive to train people to earn a living than to care for criminals and give relief to the unemployed."

Dr. Ballou's talk was one of five on the topic "Education in Washington." Assistant Superintendent Robert L. Haycock, discussing the local program for handicapped children, said special courses are being given 23 blind pupils, 86 deaf, 105 tuberculous, 72 crippled, 682 mental deficients, 58 in need of sight conservation and 186 needing "disciplinary" training.

Assistant Superintendents Chester W. Holmes and Garnet C. Wilkinson also spoke.

La Follette Assails Labor Act's Foes

By the Associated Press.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, called on "an influential section of industry" last night to "clean its hands" before it tries to modify the Wagner labor relations act.

He said in a radio address that a part of industry had paid detective and other agencies millions of dollars to spy upon labor, supply criminal strike-breakers and furnish arms against strikers.

"This same section of industry," he continued, "seeks by loud public clamor to weaken, or destroy, the Wagner act which has made effective our fundamental constitutional guarantees to labor."

G. W. U. Student Appeals for U. S. Fight on Syphilis

Howard Ennes, George Washington University student and editor of the Hatchet, yesterday testified before the Senate Commerce Committee in support of the La Follette bill to provide Federal control of syphilis.

Ennes, who said he spoke for the Inter-Collegiate Newspaper Association and the Washington Youth Social Hygiene Council, told the committee there is wide interest among college students in the campaign.

Ennes said that a dozen higher educational institutions have added the Wasserman test since the Public Health Office began a drive to make syphilitic cures available to everyone.

"Very Satisfying on Cold Nights," said CAPT. LAWRENCE "HOT BUTTERED RUM"

To celebrate a successful passage around the Horn, Capt. Lawrence sends a generous allowance of hot buttered rum forward to the men.

Capt. Ezra Lawrence (born Nantucket 1805) believed thoroughly in hot buttered rum as a cheerful drink for a cold night. His great grandson has told us how he made it:

"A good full measure of Virgin Islands rum in a large glass, about a teaspoon of butter, a spoonful of sugar, fill up with very hot water, sprinkle on nutmeg freely."

To make this recipe nowadays, you need Government House Rum, the principal rum from the Virgin Islands. A sound, honest rum, distilled directly from cane juice.

Kennedy Talks Ship Problems With Roosevelt

Parley Draws Interest Due to Clash Over Maritime Mediation.

By Edward T. Folliard.

President Roosevelt and Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the Maritime Commission, last night held a lengthy conference on the American merchant marine. Kennedy, just returned from a Florida vacation, was the President's guest at dinner.

Particular interest attached to the nocturnal conference because of the current battle over legislation for settling labor disputes in the maritime industry, a battle that finds Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins squarley opposed to Kennedy.

Democrats Puzzled.

Kennedy, called from private life to rehabilitate the American merchant marine, recommended to Congress that maritime labor disputes be handled by a mediation board, as in the case of railroad labor disputes. Miss Perkins told a Senate committee that the maritime industry was not "ripe" for such legislation and that it would be a "mistake" to enact it at this time. This also is the argument of the Committee for Industrial Organization, which fears that the sailors would be robbed of the strike weapon at a time when they are not thoroughly organized.

Anxious Democrats in Congress would like to know where President Roosevelt stands in the controversy—on the side of Kennedy or Miss Perkins.

By the time the mediation legislation comes up for debate in Congress, Kennedy probably will be gone from Washington. He is to resign as chairman of the Maritime Commission in a few days and on February 23 he is scheduled to sail for England as America's Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

Union "Purge" Talked.

Charges that the National Maritime Union, C. I. O. affiliate, is dominated by Communists, were echoed yesterday by reports that the more conservative sailors in the union are talking about a "purge" of the radical leaders.

Whether the reports are true will be known when the ballots are counted in an election that soon is to start. A president, a vice president and a secretary-treasurer are the national officers to be elected.

Joe Curran, general organizer of the N. M. U., is unopposed for the office of president. He has been called a Communist by Joseph P. Ryan, A. F. of L., longshoremen's boss, but Senators and Representatives who know him are confident that he is not.

For the office of vice president, there are 12 candidates, and no less than 8 of them are avowed or suspected Communists. The ratio in the race for secretary-treasurer is even greater. Of the ten candidates for this office, according to information received at the Capitol, eight are Communists.

West Pointers Raise Voices in Songs of Peace

Police Feel Better As Man Tries to Sell Stolen Guns

Possibility that 32 guns stolen from a sporting goods store Sunday were to arm a bandit gang was discarded last night when police learned that a well-dressed young man attempted to sel lto pistols to a taxicab driver.

The cab driver, whose identity was not disclosed, said the man boarded the cab at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, tried to make the sale and jumped out when the driver refused the offer.

WageBoard Denies Ruling Cost Jobs

Reports that retail establishments in the District were "firing women employes indiscriminately" to escape the $17 weekly minimum wage that went into effect yesterday, were denied by Miss Gwen Geach, executive secretary of the Minimum Wage Board.

Besieged by many telephone calls yesterday, the board made an immediate survey and found the reports untrue.

"To the contrary," Miss Geach said, "the employers are well satisfied with the new weekly scale and in some cases where the board ordered a lower wage for learners or apprentices, the employers stated a wage above that required would be paid."

86 U. S. Warships Sail In Games' Rehearsal

Los Angeles, Feb. 14 (AP).—Main fighting units of the United States fleet moved through squally weather off Southern California today for a last major workout before the annual midpacific six weeks' war games which start four weeks from today. Admiral Claude C. Bloch took 86 warships and some 300 fighting planes out for secret maneuvers. The time at sea will depend upon weather conditions.

The program originated in District Traffic Court. Principals in the unrehearsed skit were Yogi, Traffic Policeman A. J. Kaskeski and Judge Hobart Newman.

The script was brief and simple. Kaskeski said Yogi was traveling 70 miles an hour along a 30-mile zone on New York avenue northeast last Thursday. Yogi said he thought he was on the open highway.

Woman Killed on Way Home; Husband Sought

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 14 (U.P.).—Mrs. Jeanette Furnival, 22, department store employe, was shot and fatally wounded tonight by an unidentified man as she alighted from a bus a short distance from her home.

Police said the young woman had been estranged from her husband for four months. They were searching for the husband, Richard, 26.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 14 (AP).—Robbers cracked a repository in the second floor offices of the Powers & Anderson Dental Co. some time Saturday night and escaped with approximately $6,000 worth of dental gold, W. Frank Powers, one of the owners, reported to police today.

The cracksmen entered the building through a basement coal chute, detectives said.

Woman Is Felled By Hammer Blow; Husband Arrested

Knocked unconscious by a blow on the head with a hammer, Mrs. Ola Mae Blackstock, 35, 1301 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was reported in serious condition in Emergency Hospital last night.

Police seized the woman's husband, Thomas W. Blackstock, 42, 1321 M street northwest, immediately after the woman was felled at her desk in the Internal Revenue Department.

Building guards grabbed Blackstock as he stood above his prostrate wife.

Physicians said Mrs. Blackstock had concussion of the brain and possibly a skull fracture.

Policeman A. T. Engstrom, of the First Precinct, who booked the man for investigation, said Blackstock had been drinking heavily.

Highway Fund Dispute Up to Commissioners

Sen. Thomas to Be Guided by Their Recommendation on Revenue Bill.

Still unconvinced that highway fund money should not be used for general revenue appropriations in the District, Chairman Thomas of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations indicated yesterday he will be guided by the recommendation of the Commissioners.

He reiterated, after hearing spokesmen for organized motorists, that it makes no difference which fund the money comes from.

"It's like taking money from one pocket and putting it in another," he commented.

George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, was the principal witness opposing restoration of the $765,000 street lighting appropriation to the highway fund yesterday. Today Washington I. Cleveland, of the District Motor Club, will testify.

Parking Meters Urged.

Keneipp told the sub-committee that if the Senate restores the street lighting item to the highway fund, as recommended by the Budget Bureau, it will jeopardize the chance for including the District in the Federal highway bill now before the House Roads Committee.

He also urged that parking meters be given a trial in Washington. The Senate sub-committee has twice recommended the meters, only to have the provision stricken on the floor.

An appropriation to start construction of a new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge was asked by Evan H. Tucker, president of the Northeast Washington Citizens Association, and E. J. Read, president of the Congress Heights Citizens Association.

School Additions Sought.

Read also asked funds for a seven-room addition to the new Anacostia Senior-Junior High School, a site for a new elementary school at Bradbury Heights and a four-room addition to Buchanan School.

Dr. Charles B. Campbell, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, urged construction of an additional ward at Gallinger Hospital.

Ad Club to Hear King.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, will be guest speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Washington Advertising Club at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow. Granville B. Jacobs will discuss "Strategy in Handling People."

Envoy to Cuba Joins Fete for 'Maine' Today

Rites at Ship's Mast and Fort Myer Will Mark Date of Sinking.

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, Dr. Jose T. Baron, Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, and Commander in Chief Alfred J. Kennedy, of the United Spanish War Veterans, will "Remember the Maine" today at exercises at Fort Myer, marking the fortieth anniversary of the famous battleship's destruction in Havana harbor.

At Arlington Cemetery the women's auxiliary of the veterans will place wreaths at the base of the Maine monument in commemoration of the mysterious incident that precipitated the Spanish-American war.

The historic date will be marked at the Mayflower Hotel this evening by the annual banquet of the Department of the District of Columbia, U. S. W. V. Guests will include Postmaster General James A. Farley, Assistant Secretary Johnson, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs; Senator McGill (Democrat), of Kansas, chairman of the Senate Pensions Committee; Representative Gasque (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the House Pensions Committee; Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the House Rules Committee, and officials of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Past Commander Charles D. Long is chairman of the banquet committee.

Department Commander Victor L. Wooldridge will preside at the Fort Myer ceremonies, to be held in the Riding Hall at 2 p. m. A platoon of soldiers, sailors and marines and the Marine Band, led by Capt. Taylor Branson, will attend the services.

Miss Marjorie League, whose grandfather lost his life when the Maine went down, is to sing and Mrs. Mary McGauley, national president of the auxiliary, and representatives of other veterans' organizations will be present. Past Commander Charles E. McCaffery is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Ceremonies at the mast of the Maine, in Arlington Cemetery, will begin at 1 p. m., when wreaths will be placed at base of the monument by representatives of President Roosevelt, the Republic of Cuba, officers of the U. S. W. V. and others. Department Auxiliary President Myrtle Moxley will be in charge.

Emblem Contest Entries Close at Midnight Tonight

It is not too late to enter your drawing in The Washington Post-Federation of Businessmen's Association Emblem Contest. The deadline is midnight tonight.

If you mail your entry, send it to the Emblem Editor of The Washington Post, postmarked not later than midnight tonight.

Or, you may bring it to The Washington Post Building before midnight.

Here's all you have to do. Draw an original emblem to be used in blue and gold by the Federation of Businessmen's Association, using the name of that body. Preferably the drawing should be colored blue and gold.

First prize is $25. Judges are Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Mrs. John Daugherty, Theodore S. Grape and C. Powell Minnigerode, of the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

The federation is the clearing house of local business associations, including Central Georgia Avenue, Connecticut Avenue, Brookland-Woodridge, Columbia Heights, New Center Market, Northeast and Southwest groups.

The winning emblem will be displayed in windows of members.

Presbyterians Get Episcopalian Gift

An Episcopal bishop, the Right Rev. Robert L. Paddock, of New York City, has made the first contribution to the $10,000,000 Sesquicentennial Fund for Christian Education, being raised by the Presbyterian Church, it was announced yesterday.

The purpose of the campaign, which will continue until 1940, is to stabilize the financial condition of 53 Presbyterian colleges and 52 university centers where the Presbyterian Church maintains pastors.

Alcatraz Cell Means 'Death' To Criminals, Ex-Inmate Says

Alcatraz

"rock." Everyone knew of their plans. They chose to be shot down rather than stand the mental torture another hour.

Jimmy went first. He made a break for "the fence"—a high wall around the open stockade. Twenty-six machine gun slugs cut short his 25-year sentence. It was a quick death.

Bowers was next. He got as far as a ledge on the island cliffs. They carried his bullet-riddled body back inside. Both knew they didn't have a chance—but they knew it was a quick and painless "escape."

I wondered for a long time what the little pipe leading into my cell was used for. One night I found out.

All Lights on at Night.

It was after midnight. The ever-present flood lights made the cell-block as bright—brighter—than day. The patrolling guards wear leather heels. The constant clump, clump of their tread was the only sound to be heard. And that steady beat echoed through the building like trip-hammers on an anvil.

Then, from one of the upper tiers, came a convict's voice, pitched high, almost a scream:

"Lift your —— —— feet!"

Instantly, the place was alive. Guards armed with clubs—they don't carry guns inside the prison walls—came running from all directions. Frantically, they tried to trace the shout.

But by this time the cry had been taken up from all corners of the cell room. There must have been 75 guards milling around on the catwalks outside our cells. Bedlam had broken loose.

It was then I learned what the little pipe into my cell was for. With a sudden hissing sound, the pipe loosed a sickening, stifling, stinging vapor—tear gas.

Gas Turned on in Cells.

Every cell in the block had the same kind of pipe. The gas is controlled from a central valve. It wasn't a minute before we were all choking, spitting and screaming. The gas didn't last long—but long enough to teach me another Alcatraz "lesson."

Sleep was out of the question the rest of the night. The next morning the mess hall guard detail was re-enforced—just in case.

My stomach was a little upset and I couldn't eat much breakfast. As a consequence, I didn't touch half my food. The next morning, what I left was again served to me and I was told I would continue to get it until it was eaten.

I've said before the food is good—excellent. But you must eat what is put before you—or get it the next day. They don't waste a scrap.

As the days wore on, I became more and more impressed with my surroundings. My identity had gone. Names don't mean a thing in Alcatraz. I was just another number. I realize that names don't mean much in any other prison—but in most places they at least remember you are human.

(Ritchey tomorrow will tell the story of Al Capone in Alcatraz.)

U.S. Monopolies Breed Revolt, Borah Asserts

By the Associated Press.

Monopolies are breeding in this country a condition which leads to revolution, Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, told the Senate yesterday.

In a speech which may be followed in the next two or three weeks by a Presidential message on the same subject, the "Lion of Idaho" questioned whether the new farm and housing bills would do any good unless Congress acted at this session against private price-fixing.

The Idaho Senator is sponsoring with Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, a measure to license corporations engaged in interstate commerce. Licenses would be denied corporations operating in violation of the antitrust laws. Borah said the bill, pending before a judiciary sub-committee, would be reported to the Senate soon.

Whether it will have Administration support has not yet been made clear.

Borah voted against the Administration's new farm legislation, explaining he "could not bring myself to believe in any program which looks to the theory of reduction of foodstuffs" while "thousands are slowly starving."

Psychiatrist to Speak.

Leslie B. His subject is "Emotional Control in Children."

California Flood Rises, Rains Halt

San Francisco, Feb. 14 (AP).—Surcease from rains and driving winds that have swept northern California for 19 days left the western seaboard relatively calm tonight, but flood damage grew as the final run-off choked valley creeks and rivers.

The crisis neared in the Stockton region, where the principal flood threat was expected with tonight's high tide up the Sacramento River.

River engineers, who estimated crop losses in the Stockton area at some $100,000, feared further destruction would result. About 18,000 acres of farm land had been flooded, although hundreds of men were engaged in strengthening levees.

Blackjack Game Causes Holding 3 to Grand Jury

Pedro Sangalang was dealing in a little blackjack game last week. His losses mounted steadily, and he decided to watch his fellow players' moves carefully. Convinced that something was amiss, he purposely misdealt the last hand, he said.

The strategy was unsuccessful, according to testimony he gave in Police Court yesterday. The other players became angry, beat him, took $17 from him and told him to go home, he said.

Judge Casey ordered the alleged sleight-of-hand artists held to the grand jury under bond of $300 each. The accused Filipinos gave their names as Dominador Jarino, 1621 Twenty-first street northwest, and Johnny Cruz and Baltazar Anunciacion, both of whom said they live at the Filipino Center, 1203 Twentieth street northwest.

Jury Frees Jilted Girl In Sweetheart Killing

Detroit, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—Spectators in Recorder's Court cheered late today when a jury of ten women and two men returned a verdict of not guilty in the first degree murder trial of Margaret Tack, pretty stenographer, who killed her sweetheart. The 20-year-old girl shot and killed Lloyd McCardy September 13 after he had jilted her for the love of Clarabelle Banish, 22. Her attorney contended she had been driven temporarily insane by the fear of unwed motherhood.

NATURE MAKES IT HARD TO MAKE ALUMINUM CHEAP

ALUMINUM
1 POUND
Yet man, by his ingenuity, has found ways to make aluminum to sell in bulk for only 20c a pound.

YOUR DINNER COMPANION MAY NOT KNOW THIS

For centuries, aluminum was one of Nature's secrets. She locked it tight in the earth — not as metal but in chemical form. Once it cost so much to get metal out of these stubborn chemicals that aluminum was worth more than gold.

Charles Hall — one of our founders — was the first to break Nature's hold on aluminum. When he discovered his process, fifty years ago, aluminum was selling for $8 a pound.

How that price of $8 was reduced, dollar by dollar and penny by penny, to 20 cents a pound, is an epic of American achievement.

For fifty years we have held to one purpose: To make aluminum so plentiful and so cheap that everyone could use it for almost everything.

Year after year, a lot of our money has gone into the building of more efficient plants to make aluminum cheap, and into research to make it cheaper.

Were it not for these heavy investments, useful aluminum might never have been useful at all.

Austrian Nazis Given Hearing BySchuschnigg

Cabinet Posts Rumored for 2 Who Saw Chancellor; Party Ruled Legal.

By the United Press

Vienna, Feb. 14.—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg took steps tonight toward restoring a place in the government to Austria's outlawed Nazis, apparently under the terms of the bargain he struck with Fuehrer Hitler of Germany in their Berchtesgaden conference.

Schuschnigg called in two prominent Nazis for consultations which it was believed might lead to possible cabinet changes.

Simultaneously the Austrian supreme court gave the country's Nazis a measure of victory by ruling that membership in the Nazi Party, suppressed in June, 1933, is not punishable, but that participation in the Nazi Stormtroopers remains an offense against the constitution of May 1, 1934, which established Schuschnigg's Fatherland Front as Austria's only legal political party.

Nazi Terrorism Continues.

Schuschnigg conferred first with Gen. Karl Bardolff, a leader of the moderate Nazi wing, and later with Dr. Seyss-Inquart, Nazi party member, and several of the latter's sympathizers.

It was rumored that Dr. Seyss-Inquart, a friend of Schuschnigg despite his Nazi affiliations, might replace Dr. Adolf Pelz as minister of justice in the cabinet.

The chancellor also arranged to consult with leaders of the Socialist party and workers' delegates.

An official government spokesman insisted, however, that no cabinet resignations or other changes were anticipated at this time.

Usually reliable quarters said Schuschnigg and Hitler were negotiating an agreement supplementing the Austro-German accord of July 11, 1936, which was "reaffirmed" at Berchtesgaden on Saturday.

It was hoped, informants said, that Hitler would announce the new agreement in his Reichstag speech next Sunday in Berlin.

[A high government source said Schuschnigg would follow up his conference with Hitler by joining Hitler's April meeting with Premier Mussolini in Rome, the Associated Press reported.

[The same source said readjustment of Austro-German relations was only one object of Hitler's recent talk with the Austrian chancellor. The broader purpose of formation of a new association of middle European states for promotion of regional economic and political co-operation was ascribed to the meeting.—Editor's note.]

A Hitch Develops.

Berlin, Feb. 14 (AP).—The path to a complete understanding between Germany and Austria and the Anglo-German settlement that depends on it still is strewn with potential stumbling blocks.

The conference Saturday between Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg marked only the beginning of negotiations.

(In Vienna Schuschnigg was said to have brought three proposals to put before President Wilhelm Miklas for his selection. A hitch in the settlement was reported to have developed as the chancellor discussed his interview with Hitler in hours long conferences with the president and cabinet.

(Miklas was said to be withholding his approval because he objected to Hitler's suggestion a Nazi sympathizer be made minister of the interior with full control of police.)

Tinker Husband To Help M'Donald Daughter in Pub

London, Feb. 14 (AP).—"Tinker" Norman Ridgley, whose elbows planted on the counter of Ishbel MacDonald's Old Plow Inn long have been a familiar sight to the little village of Speen, Buckinghamshire, shortly will move behind the counter as the husband of Great Britain's former "First Lady."

The village handyman will help draw beer when they marry, the daughter of the late J. Ramsay MacDonald, Britain's only Labor prime minister, indicated.

Goebbels Exhorts Germany to Rush Jews' Liquidation

Berlin, Feb. 14 (AP).—Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels' organ, Der Angriff, today urged the Nazi regime to speed up the tempo of "liquidating" Jews in Germany's economic life.

"It is about time for a further decisive step," to force Jewish businessmen to sell out, said Der Angriff in an editorial.

The appointment of Rudolf Schaeer, known as an ardent anti-Semite, as a department chief in the ministry of economics was considered an indication harsher steps to freeze out the Jewish businessman were coming.

No Wonder You Are Constipated!

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? Bread, meat, potatoes? No wonder you're constipated—due to lack of "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It means the kind of food that forms a soft, bulky mass in the bowels. It's this mass that helps your bowels move.

The common sense thing to do about it is to eat a natural laxative food. Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast will give you just the "bulk" you need. And it gives you, in addition, Nature's great intestinal-tonic, vitamin B1. Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Britain Opens Gibraltar of East As 3 U. S. Cruisers Give Salute

By the Associated Press.

Singapore, Feb. 14.—With three United States cruisers as the only foreign warships present, Great Britain formally opened the world's largest naval dock today, marking virtual completion of her $150,000,000 "Gibraltar of the Orient."

Rear Admiral Julius Townsend, commanding the battle cruisers Trenton, Memphis and Milwaukee, represented the United States at the inauguration of the $55,000,000 drydock, which is the major feature of the naval base.

Although two years' work on subsidiary equipment must be done before the base officially is completed, British naval authorities guardedly admitted it is now "ready for use." They said Britain's entire navy could be based here "comfortably."

Malay Sultan Present.

The United States warships dressed ship in salute as Sir Shenton Thomas, governor of the Straits Settlements, dedicated the dock and named it "The King George VI Dock."

Twenty-four British naval ships from bases in the Far East were here for the occasion.

Among the 11,000 guests at the ceremony were sultans of the Malay states, including the Sultan of Johore, who made a personal gift of $2,500,000 toward the cost of the base.

Police Watch for Spies.

Hundreds of picked police, guarding against espionage, prevented visitors from entering certain sectors.

The drydock, on the heavily fortified north coast of Singapore Island, formally was opened when Sir Shenton's official yacht, Seabelle II, slid inside cutting a 130-foot tape stretched across the entrance.

Col. J. J. Llewellin, civil lord of the admiralty, welcomed "representatives of the United States whose visit of friendship to these shores so fortunately coincided with the ceremony and whose nation is so closely akin to our own in aspirations and ideals."

"The Singapore base is not a menace or threat to anyone," he declared. "We signed the Kellogg pact and we mean to keep it."

Stalin to Seek Alien Radicals' Backing in War

Hopes for 'Political Aid' for Russia in Case of Attack.

Moscow, Feb. 14.—Josef Stalin, leader of the Communist Party, urged today that the Soviet Union bolster its defense program by organizing the working classes of other countries to give Russia political aid "in case of military attack."

The "final victory of Socialism" will not be complete, he said, until such aid is added to Russia's efforts to strengthen her army and navy.

Stalin's declarations were made in a letter in Pravda, the party organ, written in response to a question of a young Communist League agitator who asked him whether the final victory of socialism could be considered won.

He did not say whether he had in mind collaboration with foreign labor parties, non-Communist as well as Communist, nor did he mention communis or advocate the overthrow of capitalism in other countries.

"Of course," Stalin said, "it doesn't mean that we must sit with folded arms awaiting help from the outside.

"On the contrary, the aid of the international proletariat should be joined with our work for increasing the defense capacity of our country, of strengthening the Red army and the Red navy, the mobilization of the whole country and with our struggle against armed attacks and attempts to restore bourgeois connections.

The first stage of Socialism's victory in Russia has been won, Stalin wrote, "by liquidation of the bourgeois." He said the exiled Leon Trotzky and others who advocated international revolution had been shown to be wrong.

He added, however, that the second problem, that of foreign relations and guarantees against military invasion and restoration of capitalism, had not been solved.

Japan's Secrecy Backed by Italy

Rome, Feb. 14 (AP).—Italian sympathy with Japan's refusal to disclose her naval program to the United States, Great Britain and France is being expressed by the Fascist press.

Headlines such as "Japan Puts on America, England and France the Responsibility for Naval Armament Race" reflected the general attitude toward's Japan answer to the tri-power demand that she outline her naval plans.

Reds Win in Costa Rica.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Feb. 14 (AP).—The Communist Party has won two seats in Costa Rica's one-house congress. Returns from Sunday's congressional election showed a Communist vote of about 7,000. The government party won 17 seats.

Japan's Thrust 20 Miles From RailroadCenter

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Tuesday, Feb. 15.—A Japanese army of 60,000 men, with hundreds of tanks and planes, has surged through mud and snow across the plains of North China and is threatening to bottle up 400,000 Chinese on the central front.

The spearhead of this swiftly mobile column had less than 20 miles, including the broad Yellow River, between it and Kaifeng, Honan provincial capital near the western end of China's vital central front corridor.

Capture of Kaifeng would choke off the Lunghai Railway, practically the only means of exit for the legions of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek deployed along the railway for 300 miles eastward to the Yellow Sea.

Japanese said this and other offensives from both the north a 1 south against the Lunghai Railway were continuing with terrific losses to the Chinese.

The conflict had developed over the week-end into one of the greatest battles of the world.

Rumania May Return To Tatarescu Policies

Bucharest, Feb. 14 (AP).—Pending cabinet changes were expected today to return Rumania to a government similar to the liberal regime of Premier George Tatarescu, whose ministry was replaced by the short-lived anti-Semitic Octavian Goga cabinet.

Six ministers of the present cabinet headed by Dr. Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, are Tatarescu liberals, and three posts in the cabinet still vacant were expected to be filled by former members of the Tatarescu cabinet.

U. S. Modifies Policy of Gold 'Sterilization'

Gold

leased more gold," asserted Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, another monetary expansionist.

Secretary Morgenthau's announcement came after a week-end of mysterious conferences between him and his assistants and Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system, and his aides. The current situation was said to have been thoroughly surveyed before the step was finally agreed on.

Two factors are said to have inspired the action. One was the fact that a heavy inflow of gold from Europe, which prompted the original sterilization policy in December, 1936, no longer exists. Early in 1937 the net gold import totaled as much as $327,000,000 in a single month.

The inflow of gold had the effect of broadening the American credit base and was feared as a strong contribution to a runaway credit boom. This heavy inflow of gold also coincided with a period of rising prices. It was for that reason that the effect of incoming gold on the American economic structure was nullified. As has been said, the increase in gold stocks acquired in the last six weeks has totaled only about $30,000,000. In December the net gold import totaled $18,000,000 and in November was $22,100,000. Thus the original reason for sterilization has passed.

The other factor was that, whereas the country experienced a rapidly rising price-level when the policy was adopted, it is now in a period of recession with falling prices. The authorities apparently wished to do something to halt, or at least to discourage, deflationary forces. What effect modification of the sterilization policy will have remained problematical, except none thought it would be in any way harmful.

By retaining the policy on gold acquisitions in excess of $100,000,000 quarterly, the Treasury provided a ceiling of protection to the country's credit base against a resumption of a heavy gold inflow from Europe. In other words, the Treasury policy permits a normal inflow of gold to enter the financial streams of the Nation but guards against the dangers resulting from an extraordinary inflow.

The mechanics of handling gold acquisitions prior to the adoption of the sterilization policy were these: The Treasury purchased all gold offered to it, whether newly mined or imported, by printing gold certificates and handing these to the reserve banks, which in turn paid out its currency to cover the cost of the gold. This mean an increase in bank deposits—and an expansion in the credit base—equivalent to the amount of gold thus bought.

Under the sterilization policy, the Treasury went into the money markets and borrowed the sums required to cover the purchase of gold. In effect the Treasury took out of the money markets and the banks a sum equal to the gold increment. Actually this was deflationary since at the end of the operation there was less money available for credit due to the deposit reserve requirements than before the gold arrived.

The Treasury is now going back to the old system, except for gold acquisitions in excess of $100,000,000 quarterly.

Patman

ter store for all stores in excess of 500.

The weight of the proposed levy, a sponsor of the bill indicated, can best be illustrated by the fact that a few of the larger grocery chains now operating in the East would pay a combined total of $560,000,000 in taxes additional to those now paid.

If a chain operates in more than one State the tax shall be multiplied by the number of States in which it operates. Patman declared, however, that stockholders would be protected by the fact that for the first two years taxes are "sufficiently low" through graduated provisions as to enable present concerns to operate without further expansion and "will give them an opportunity to dispose of their retail outlets that will be unprofitable after the second year."

He added: "I predict that these stores can be sold at a price which will cause a return to each stockholder of an amount much greater than he could obtain for his stock."

Concerns whose gross annual business does not exceed $250,000, regardless of the number of stores or of their locations, are exempted from the tax. Filling stations which do not handle automobile tires or tubes are also exempt.

Patman asserted: "Loans to little business should be preceded by laws to protect small businesses against ruthless, greedy competition by the monopolistic and heartless few. Practically all small businesses desiring loans and worthy of loans can now obtain them locally if proper assurance is given that their businesses will not be unmercifully destroyed overnight by absentee ownership."

Methodist Youth Opposes Navy Bill

Underwood & Underwood.

The youth he represents "will not bear arms," Frank Littell, social action chairman for the National Council of Methodist Youth, declared yesterday as he attacked Representative Vinson's $800,000,000 naval construction bill. Littell, 20, and a student at Union Theological Seminary in New York, is one of the youngest men ever to testify before a Congressional committee.

Arms Parley Plan Is 'Futile,' Leaders in Congress Assert better naval and air forces to defend the country adequately.

A Japanese foreign office spokesman told the Associated Press in Tokyo that Japan might divulge naval construction information if the request were made unofficially.

The organized bloc of House members known as the "progressive-liberal" group vigorously denounced the Sheppard-May war-profits bill, due to be favorably reported today by the House Military Affairs Committee, as a "betrayal of World War veterans" and "a surrender by Congress, in advance of war, to a dictatorship."

Pittman's 10-day absence from the Senate is expected to have the effect of relaxing immediate pressure on the Foreign Relations Committee to report a number of bills and resolutions before it which are peculiarly harassing in the present complicated world situation. Before leaving he made detailed criticisms of the King-Maverick resolution, saying:

"Any such action by the United States Senate at the present time would weaken the effect of our Government's firm stand on the protection of our rights in China.

"Our Government for many years has attempted to fix definite limitations on the building of naval armaments. All these efforts have been futile.

"If it were impossible by reason of distrust and fear of the governments to accomplish substantial limitations of armaments in 1922, when there was no threat of war, and in 1935, when conditions were much better than they are now, there can be no hope at the present time of success."

The testimony of Littell, young theologian, amazed the House Naval Affairs Committee to the extent of outspoken expressions of disgust.

His organization is pledged not to fight in any war in the Orient, he said, and added that he would not bear arms to defend the United States against a Japanese invasion, saying:

"Such an invasion would mean that civilization is on the way down." Then Representative Alfred Phillips (Democrat), of Connecticut, drew from Littell the admission he would not fight even to protect his mother and sisters from foreign invaders. Littell said:

"I would not do it and they would not have me do it."

Littell criticised the Administration's foreign policy as "ambiguous and undeclared" and protested further naval expenditures as "criminal sacrifice" of the relief needs of the people. He said:

"An attempt to increase military appropriations is nothing but an anti-social action in view of unemployment and relief needs . . . Our organization, representing 100,000 members in 30 States, is pledged not to fight in any war in the Orient. We are no Nation to tell Japan to get out of China until our investments and imperial interests are removed."

He said a substaintial number of the organization he represented believed as he did, and would not fight to protect their mothers and sisters. Representative Mott (Democrat), Oregon, interrupted to say:

"It's a good thing for the country to know how you people think. I'd heard it stated before but I never believed it."

Fish, who followed Littell to the stand, remarked at once:

"Any young man who would not fight to protect the United States ought to be put in jail."

He then criticized the proposed 20 per cent increase in the United States fleet as "unwise, unnecessary and inconsistent with our foreign policy of neutrality and not meddling or interfering with foreign nations. This legislation provides a direct road to war. It means a huge super-navy to police and quarantine the world."

McReynolds, leaving the White House, stated he "thoroughly agreed" with the Vinson amendment to the $800,000,000 naval increase bill, which is a statement of naval policy visualizing an American navy large enough to protect both coast lines and all insular possessions.

He added: "I am quite sure the President does, too, although I am not authorized to speak for him." (Many Congressmen privately stated their belief last week the Vinson amendment was inspired by the White House.)

Representative Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, yesterday corrected news stories that he had attacked McReynolds as a "Tory and Fascist." O'Connell explained he believed he had actually said the neutrality act, introduced by McReynolds in the House, was "a Tory and Fascist piece of legislation," and added he did not blame reporters as he speaks with unusual rapidity. He made the explanation on the floor of the House.

Admiral Woodward, speaking at a luncheon of the New York chapter of the Chaplains Association of the Army, demanded an end of "unwholesome pacifistic propaganda, a large proportion of which is financed by European nations."

He said: "In this age of man where might makes right, the god of battle is with the strong. It is a duty to help mold a public opinion that supports preparedness—not for the sake of war, but for the sake of peace."

Representative Sirovich asked early revision of the neutrality act to permit "the legally constituted governmnet of Spain to buy American arms and munitions, especially anti-aircraft guns, to protect defenseless cities against the troops of Hitler and Mussolini.' More than a score of members shook his hand in congratulation after his attack on General Francisco Franco.

Senate Enacts Farm Bill by 56-to-31 Vote of Idaho, and Senator Hiram Johnson, of California (Republicans), and Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

"What are we legislating for?" asked Senator Johnson. "No one understands this bill, no one can explain it. It passes belief."

The California Republican said, "No man who values his independence" can afford to vote for a bill that "tells the farmer what he will do and how."

"You are beginning the regimentation of industry," said Johnson. "You are beginning it with agriculture. You are starting on a road that will mean ruin to agriculture, industry and democracy. This bill alters the economy of the country, alters democracy."

Burke said he was "alarmed" because "the heart of the bill is compulsion" and because the farmer "who does not choose to be a cooperator will find himself denied a share in benefits paid out of tax funds to which he has contributed."

McNary said the bill would make every farmer a "vassal" of Secretary Wallace and declared farmers were seeking "parity, not compulsion." While "parity" payments are provided in the bill, McNary pointed out no money was provided to make them.

Senator Borah challenged claims the bill would raise farm prices by quoting from an interview with Louis Bean, Agriculture Department economic adviser, predicting a lower level of farm prices in the next few years. He declared the bill embodied "scarcity and compulsory" principles "to a controlling degree."

McAdoo predicted the legislation would create "such a hubbub" that repeal would be in order at the next session of Congress. McAdoo called it "a fundamentally wrong agricultural economy," which provided bureaucratic control "offensive to the freemen who live on the farms."

Shipstead said he was convinced the bill will "not solve the farmers' problem." Charging declines in the farm share of the national income, he said civilizations declined when non-agricultural and industrial groups cut into the farmers' income, adding: "That's what's happening in this country."

Friends of the measure sat quietly through the three-hour attack, rising only intrequently to challenge or "correct" assertions made by the critics. Advance polls had shown the bill would pass by a good margin.

Only just before the vote, Barkley rose to point out both major parties had declared for crop control measures in their national platforms. He said Congressional committees worked out the program without Administration dictation. He said the measure "may have to be changed" in the future but he was convinced it was the best bill possible.

Most significant single feature of the bill provides for imposition of marketing quotas when unusual surpluses threaten in any of the five commodities. These would be proclaimed by the Secretary when supplies passed stated surplus points. Then a farm referendum would be ordered and quotas would be enforced only if approved by two-thirds of the growers of a given commodity.

Cotton—19,500,000 bales.
Corn—2,845,000,000 bushels.
Wheat—945,000,000 bushels.
Rice—13,300,000 barrels.
Flue-cured tobacco—1,660,000,000 pounds.

Penalties for sales over quotas would be placed at 2 cents a pound on cotton, 15 cents a bushel on corn and wheat, 50 per cent of the market price on tobacco and 1 cent a pound on rice.

Marketing qhotas would be used only when soil conservaion acreage allotments failed to hold supplies to normal. Farmers who cooperated in this basic soil conservation program would be rewarded by continued benefit payments.

Benefit increases are provided for farmers who receive less than $200, and a $10,000 "ceiling" is placed on soil benefit checks.

"Parity" payments, sufficient to give a specific commodity the same purchasing power it had in prewar years, would be made "when and if" funds were available.

The Commodity Credit Corporation may make loans on farm commodities to "co-operators" when prices fall. Such crops would be stored on farms as collateral.

In addition, the Commodity Credit Corporation was authorized to make additional subsidy payments of 2 cents a pound on 1937 cotton on which farmers already have received 9-cent loans. The corporation would take over the cotton.

The first step toward Federal crop insurance is provided by setting up of a $100,000,000 Federal insurance corporation to underwrite wheat crops against damage or destruction by natural causes.

Four regional laboratories would be set up to seek out new uses for farm commodities.

As the first step toward placing the new program in effect, the Agriculture Department was said to be grooming farm adjustment machinery for announcement of acreage allocations to States, counties and individual farm shortly after the President signs the bill. Only farmers who keep within the acreage allotted them will receive benefit payments.

pay any taxes at all no matter how little.

"We thought we gave you a preferred position last year by imposing the tax on your gross income as against gross receipts of other businesses."

Nichols ridiculed the idea that the business privilege tax might drive the commission merchants into nearby Maryland and Virginia.

"Why, you couldn't pay the Maryland income tax under your own figures. The only solution I can see is for you to reorganize your business," he said.

R. D. Marshall, of the Washington branch of the National Commission Merchants Association, and Leigh Lawrence, of N. J. Ward & Co., spoke for the commission merchants.

Nichols complained of the high cost of living at one stage of the cross-examination.

"The price of food already is so high in Washington that if it goes any higher we won't be able to eat," he said.

The sub-committee listened more sympathetically to the protest of a representative of the wholesale tobacco dealers and promised relief.

Limerick Hunt Pressed Close To Langdon Jail

gin, jazz and joy, has been told repeatedly. She was 19 years old, an usher at old Poll's Theater and secretary of the Sky High Whoopee Club. She lived in a gaunt two-story frame house in the Southeast with a brother, Vernon, 18, and Richard Reed, a roomer.

The morning of December 31, 1930, Vernon came down at 8:30 to awaken his sister and discovered her dead. A physician pronounced death due to a hemorrhage, but an undertaker discovered a bullet wound in behind her ear. It proved to have been made by a slug from a .25-caliber automatic pistol.

Of all the witnesses called through the long inquest and investigation which followed, Policeman Langdon was most colorful. Detectives found a dozen firearms in his home. Langdon explained he was a collector.

Then, on another call which police made some days later, they made a discovery which blew Langdon to the front pages and cost his job with the Metropolitan Police.

In the basement they discovered two whisky stills.

Langdon testified that parties at the isolated Limerick home on the Anacostia flats were so frequent, so protracted and so noisy that he ordered her to vacate the place, which she agreed to do January 1, 1931.

Much of Langdon's testimony at the inquest was unprintable. He admitted he had watched the house's interior through a back window as part of his duty as cop on the beat.

Since the girl's death, the case has been reopened many times and one man, Isadore Matin, 23, confessed the murder twice in three years, but was released both times.

Resident of Greenbelt Takes U. S. Citizenship

Brophy Tells House Unit 3,500,000 Jobs Needed at Present.

By the Associated Press.

The Committee for Industrial Organization asked the House Appropriations Committee yesterday to approve a $600,000,000 appropriation for additional relief in this fiscal year.

"At least 3,500,000 jobs are needed to cope with present unemployment," a telegram from John Brophy, C. I. O. director, to Committee Chairman Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, said. "Already in many States and cities the plight of American unemployed is desperate."

Treasury accountants figured the extra $250,000,000 relief fund sought by the President will swell to $11,391,400,000 total relief expenditures of the Roosevelt Administration, by June 30.

This sum will have been spent, in five years, for the Works Progress Administration, cash relief, the Civilian Conservation Corps, and the old Civil Works Administration.

It does not include an additional $6,000,000,000 in "emergency" expenditures for PWA, Rivers and Harbors and Housing agencies.

The current fiscal year's share of the total, including the extra $250,000,000, is $2,009,000,000.

A. F. Jorgensen Elected To Accountants Institute

New York, Feb. 14.—Election of Arnold P. Jorgensen, certified public accountant and partner in the accounting firm of Horwath & Horwath, 1319 F street northwest, Washington, as a member of the American Institute of Accountants was announced, at its headquarters here today by John L. Carey, secretary of the institute.

Election of Vinton E. Lee, partner in the accounting firm of Lee, White & Co., 724 Investment Building, Washington, to be an associate in the institute also was announced. Messrs. Jorgensen and Lee are among the 27 new members and 11 associates of the institute.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Worst Bid of the New Year.

Bad bids are no novelty to me. I hear of dozens every day, either through the mail or by word of mouth. Rarely, however, have I heard a bid that compared with the one South produced in the following hand:

With both sides vulnerable, West opened the festivities with one club. North overcalled with a spade, which East promptly doubled. Sitting behind South, I was very nearly knocked out of my chair by hearing him "rescue" with two hearts! West passed and North did likewise: East again doubled, and all passed.

Having made one of the worst bids in history, South then proceeded to play as badly as possible. West chose to open his middle spade, his idea being (as he explained later) to lead a suit that East probably would be able to win so that a heart return through declarer could follow. Dummy ducked to the first trick, and the Ace won, felling declarer's Jack. East, in an effort at deception, returned, not the Ace or Jack of hearts, but the nine-spot. Declarer ducked and the ten followed. Declarer ducked again, and West was in with the Queen. West laid down the club Ace and followed with the Queen. East overtook and returned a third club. West continued with the fourth round, which declarer ruffed. Now, in a much-too-optimistic effort to drop the two outstanding hearts together, declarer led his low heart. East pounced with his Jack and drew declarer's lone King with the Ace. West, meanwhile, discarded one spade and one diamond. A diamond return put West back on lead and he cashed two more clubs while declarer impotently discarded diamonds. The unkindest cut of all was that, when West cashed his last club at the twelfth trick, declarer had to guess whether to keep a high spade or a high diamond in the dummy. He guessed wrong, and West laid down the spade nine, for the seventh setting trick. Declarer had taken exactly one trick, a club ruff, on his contract for eight, and had thereby incurred the devastating penalty of 2,000 points!

If South had passed over one spade doubled, as he should have self withjeOw vbgkq themf MFWY done. North could have rescued himself with a bid of two diamonds, which could not have been touched by the enemy, who of course would have gone forward to their own game but not to the tune of 2,000 points.

FAT WOMEN SMOTHER IN TIGHT GIRDLES

Tight girdles and stiff foundation garments actually make many women look fatter. Instead of squeezing your fat, why don't you try to get rid of it? Why not have a slim, lovely, youthful figure that needs but little girdle control?

The Marmola way is the easy way to get rid of ugly fat. Just take 4 Marmola Prescription Tablets each day, and in place of starchy foods like potatoes and pastries, eat more salads, fruits, green vegetables, and go slow on fatty meats. That's simple, isn't it? Yet what a difference Marmola and this little change in your diet may make in your weight. Losses of 5 to 9 pounds a week have been reported in many cases from this simple, easy method of reducing. Marmola Prescription Tablets contain the same element prescribed by many doctors in treating their fat patients. Get a box at your druggist today and send that ugly fat on its way.

34 Promoted In Marine Corps By President

Two Washingtonians Given Advancement From Captain to Major.

President Roosevelt has approved the promotion of 2 captains to major and 32 first lieutenants to captain in the Marine Corps.

Among the officers approved for advancement were Capt. William N. McKelvy, jr., and Lieut. Walter Asmuth, jr., both of Washington, who are stationed at Quantico, Va., and San Francisco, Calif., respectively. The promotion of Lieut. Bankson T. Holcomb, jr., cousin of Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps, also was approved by the President. A resident of New Castle, Del., Lieut. Holcomb is on duty at the Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.

Capt. Emery E. Larson, of Minneapolis, Minn., stationed with the Second Marine Brigade in Shanghai, China, was the other officer promoted to major.

Other first lieutenants promoted to captain, their home addresses and stations, were:

Additional evidence that the show will go on, the boat will sail, the paper will go to press, despite your absence: There was regret, but little consternation, when word came that Robert Frederick Freund couldn't take the soloists part at the last appearance of the Agriculture Chorus. Prof. Freund was suffering with a bad sore throat. The chorus simply balled in Edwin Steffe, a barytone of the Washington Cathedral Choir (who recently sang Silvio in "Pagliacci" with the Columbia Grand Opera Company of New York at the Rialto Theater), and his renditions were well received . . . There was a packed house—which the chorus generally attracts—due largely to the painstaking care of training Prof. Freund has given the organization . . .

For the record's sake: "The New York State Society of Washington and the New York State Democratic Club of Washington are not one organization, as some have been led to believe," writes in Peter J. Connolly, president of the latter organization. "The New York State Society is purely a social organization which arranges dances for natives of New York who are residing in this city at the present time. These dances are held once every month at the Shoreham Hotel. The New York State Democratic Club is both social and political and holds all of its affairs at the old Levi P. Morton homestead at 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest. A regular monthly meeting will be held there tonight." Which means you can voice a soft political suggestion while performing a dreamy waltz at the State Society's affairs. In other words, one of the organizations sings "Save the Last Waltz for Me, Sweetheart," while the other rearranges it to "Save the Last Vote for Me." Which, maybe, makes the situation clearer.

According to Antonio Reyes Delgado, before the Association of Nonclassified Federal Employes: 700 Puerto Ricans are "blanketed" into Government without examination and he favored noncompetitive examinations to secure their jobs against demands of untrained workers with a civil service rating. He wanted some information to forward home for the benefit of Government employes holding jobs similar to the emergency workers in Washington . . . Four cities recently adopted civil service systems for employes in all the municipal departments. These were: Miami Beach, Fla.; Grand Forks and Minot, N. Dak., and Sioux Falls, S. Dak. The vote in Miami Beach was 792 for the civil service system, to 41 against—which is about as emphatic as the Democratic vs. Republican vote in Charleston, S. C. . . .

The Securities and Exchange Commission flings a dance and reception Friday evening, February 25, at the Raleigh Hotel, all proceeds to go to the SEC welfare fun. Senators Schwellenbach and Logan, and Representatives Ramspeck, McCormack and Bigelow will discuss employe problems at a meeting sponsored by the U. F. W. A. in the Government Auditorium, Labor Building, Thursday night. These five speakers specifically will outline for Government workers a four-fold program "for the immediate improvement of the Federal personnel structure," says the announcement, which adds that John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., which has indorsed each of the four bills to be offered, will speak on the responsibilities of a democratic government as a model employer. Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A. president, will preside.

The four bills, centers of discussion are: The Schwellenbach-Randolph substitute for the Administration minimum wage bill, which provides for extension of the $1,200 minimum wage proposed in the Administration bill to field employes and to 25,000 persons earning under $1,020 a year who are overlooked in the Administration bill. The Bigelow bill, entitled Federal workers' appeals act, sets up machinery for the adjustment of grievances in the Federal service by an impartial arbiter where Federal workers are unable to receive satisfaction otherwise. The Logan-McCormack bill establishes a five-day week, without any reduction in pay for all Federal employes. The Logan-Randolph bill establishes a maximum day of seven hours for clerical and professional workers, and eight hours for manual workers, and provides for time-and-a-half payment for overtime.

The Underlying Factor.

Neither the people nor the Government of the United States are in the least anxious to get caught in the maelstrom of an armaments race. With very good reason both look upon that possibility with deep foreboding and mistrust. Thus any rational means of averting such an expensive and dangerous development is certain to receive strong public support and sympathetic official consideration.

And yet no good will be served, and much harm may be done, by blinking realities. Until the international situation shows signs of real improvement, it would clearly be futile to summon a new arms conference. For the presumption upon which this suggestion is based—that all nations are now prepared to take concerted action to limit or reduce their armaments—is by no means demonstrated.

The great majority of nations would like nothing better than an international agreement for the limitation of armaments, military, naval and air. But such an agreement must necessarily be predicated on the acceptance by all countries, and particularly by all the great powers, of a regime of peace and nonaggression. No nation whose independence and territorial integrity are obviously threatened can be expected to reduce its defenses in any pronounced degree. This is emphasized by the fact that the pacemakers, in the field of rearmament, have hitherto been those governments with obvious aggressive ambitions.

It is because the political bases of peace have been lacking that every effort made during the past six years to achieve any measure of disarmament has so lamentably failed. For side by side with such efforts there has been a progressive deterioration in the conditions of association necessary to secure peace.

Under present circumstances, therefore, it would be a quixotic gesture for President Roosevelt to summon a world arms conference. With respect to naval armaments the situation since the last London parley, which ended in failure so far as quantitative limitations are concerned, has been getting worse rather than better. Obstacles have been encountered even with regard to so relatively simple a matter as getting Japan to provide Great Britain, the United States and France with certain elementary information regarding her present construction program.

It must not be lost to sight that the mounting burden of armaments is very largely a reflection of increasing international uncertainties. Only to the extent that these uncertainties can be removed by positive action is limitation of armaments likely to be achieved.

Government Research.

Interest in the Eicher bill to stimulate industrial research has been renewed as a result of the present business slump. If this proposal is brought forward as a recovery measure, it will serve chiefly to emphasize the paucity of constructive Administration plans to counteract the depression. But as a long-term effort to aid the development of new industries there is much to be said in its favor.

Without calling for expenditure of any specific sum, the Eicher bill would set up a plan of Federal aid to industrial research. Half of any amount appropriated for that purpose would be allotted by the Secretary of Commerce to selected universities and other non-profit-making agencies for special projects to be undertaken with the advice of the National Research Council. The other half of the fund would go to the National Bureau of Standards. All research thus undertaken would be co-ordinated under the aegis of this bureau.

Private industry has done a tremendous amount of research in this field with effective results. No doubt the Government can render a useful service to the entire country by supplementing these efforts. But any discoveries it may make are more likely to benefit the next generation than to help the millions now jobless to find work.

A more reasonable argument in support of the bill is that a government which substantially narrows the field in which private initiative may operate becomes morally obligated to take over some responsibilities previously met by private enterprise. Walter Lippmann effectively pointed out in his recent book that scientific progress is a product of free enterprise. It is only when an economic system is controlled by political agencies that it tends to become static.

If this trend is to continue, the Administration may well prepare to take over responsibility for research once carried on by private agencies. More important still, it should be considering the development of expert administrative agencies. Instead of letting the spoils system run riot, it should be training technicians competent to operate the ponderous bureaucratic machines.

In neither case is there sufficient evidence to show that the Government can perform these functions as effectively as private enterprise. But if the Government is to take over the direction of the industrial system, research and scientific administration will be two among many responsibilities that it can not hope to evade.

A D. C. Merit System.

Reorganization of the District government may properly begin with the enactment of a local civil service law. The present merit system rests on the flimsy basis of an agreement between the District Commissioners and the Civil Service Commission. In other words, the District utilizes, in so far as it is practicable, the Federal machinery of choosing personnel.

There seems to be general agreement that the local merit system should be based upon law and not an arrangement of convenience. The only debatable question is the form which the new statute should take. Should the District have a separate merit system of its own? Or should it rely upon the National Civil Service Commission to conduct the necessary examinations and prepare lists of eligibles?

As Corporation Counsel Seal begins to draft the proposed legislation, District authorities seem to favor use of existing machinery in the interests of economy. No doubt the C. S. C. could render satisfactory service to the local government if it were authorized to conduct examinations within the District to supply Washington's specific personnel needs. But under a permanent system the District certainly should not be expected to obtain its personnel from picked-over national registers. Federal examinations frequently do not meet the needs of the local community. Except in cases where a special type of technical experience is required, moreover, only local residents should be eligible for strictly local positions.

If special examinations for District jobs are to be held, savings effected by use of the Civil Service Commission's machinery might not be substantial. For a local civil service board could be composed of three District officials now serving, without increase of salary, as recommended in the Prettyman report.

It is well to remember that this proposed reform is part of a general reorganization program. The broad objective in each case is to develop here a more responsible type of municipal government. If employes obtain their positions and their promotions through a national agency, it is questionable whether their loyalty to the local government will be complete. Mr. Prettyman's committee of citizens believes that a reduction of personnel in some departments is desirable. Inefficiency and consequent overstaffing might be notably reduced by an effective personnel system within the local government.

Regardless of what plan is followed, therefore, it is clear that in no case should the C. S. C. render more than technical service. The bill may take the form of an authorization to the C. S. C. to conduct examinations at the request of local authorities. But if so it should also make provision for a District personnel director who would serve as the agent of the Commissioners in calling for examinations and making actual appointments.

A number of difficulties would be encountered in completely separating the District and Federal personnel systems, particularly in the case of the retirement benefits. But if a real municipal government is to be developed in Washington it will doubtless be necessary to untangle Federal and local functions all up and down the line. The fact that this is a difficult task does not mean that it can be indefinitely avoided.

Unprofitable Terrorism.

It is not often that demands of military strategy and the dictates of humanitarianism go hand in hand. Despite repeated efforts to "humanize" warfare, its practice has steadily tended to become more and more inhumane. The bombardment of undefended cities, with the ensuing slaughter of civilians, is now so accepted a phenomenon as to arouse little or no concerted protest.

It is the more interesting, therefore, to hear voices raised against such actions on the grounds that they are strategically futile. American military experts, carefully studying the results of the bombing of civilian centers in the Spanish and Sino-Japanese wars, have reached the conclusion that the procedure results in no military advantage comparable to its cost to the attacker.

Instead of demoralizing the helpless populations subjected to the rain of hell from high-flying bombing planes, such tactics apparently consolidate the will to resistance. In view of this experience the continuation of such a policy by responsible military leaders can only be regarded as sadism run riot.

In other words, the Douhet theory of military strategy, which had many disciples after the World War, is now losing its converts. That theory was based on the belief that an enemy may readily be subdued by a series of quick demoralizing thrusts involving paralysis of centers of communication and industry. That may be the case. But it does not follow that even huge fleets of bombing airplanes can accomplish this end.

It is not to be presumed that in the future military commands will refrain from employing acts of frightfulness against the enemy. But it is encouraging to note that responsible military leaders are coming around to the belief that terrorism as such does not pay. There is even a possibility that thinking will not stop at this stage; that the human reason may eventually realize that war itself, no matter how scrupulously waged, is a losing venture for all concerned.

The Fallacy Of Rigid Prices.

Coincident with the announcement of cuts in prices of steel products, the head of the Republic Steel Corporation, T. M. Girdler, was busily defending the industry against allegations that prices were too high. Mr. Girdler maintained that cuts in steel prices would not result in an immediate expansion of demand and warned that reductions would necessitate cuts in wage rates. These arguments against price reductions follow a familiar but specious line of reasoning.

Mr. Girdler says, for instance, that a 10 per cent cut in the price of steel would reduce the cost of an automobile only $8 and subtract only $17 from the cost of a $4,000 home. Consequently, he concludes that there is no incentive to make price concessions. Time and again we have heard this argument as a defense of high prices for food grains, for textile raw materials and many other articles, used in the manufacture of goods for consumption. It is often maintained that higher prices for raw cotton add so little to the cost of a cotton shirt or dress that sales are not affected. Again the effect of wheat prices upon the cost of bread is minimized.

If the country were disposed to accept this kind of reasoning, we should find ourselves living in an economic society with an extraordinarily rigid price structure. Even now, outside the field of monopoly, the prices of many manufactured goods, notably steel, do not fluctuate readily in response to changing business conditions. The mere fact that Mr. Girdler was arguing for maintenance of the price status quo at a time of severe depression in the steel industry is indicative of the absence of the competitive pricing in the industry.

As a matter of fact, the lesser steel companies usually follow the price lead of the United States Steel Corporation instead of competing for business by lowering prices. Nor is concerted action to uphold prices confined to steel. In many industries there is marked reluctance to cut prices, because it is well known that such reductions will be met by competitors and eventually prices may be forced below profitable levels for all. Thus, without any price agreement or illegal combination in restraint of trade, we find a very pronounced tendency for certain classes of manufactured goods to resist price cuts even in face of business recession.

If this resistance is aimed against uneconomic forms of price cutting designed to take business from a competitor at any price it is beneficial. But when it takes the form of stubborn efforts to maintain prices at levels that discourage buying, it is a real deterrent to recovery.

Furthermore, high prices for industrial raw materials entering into the production of consumable goods, even if not reflected in higher final selling prices, cut down manufacturing margins and discourage production of consumers' goods. They also lead manufacturers to seek for other means of cutting their costs, often with the result that wages are reduced or other economies effected at the expense of labor.

Demon's Work.

Can it be a strategy of the union forces seeking to invade the Ford stronghold? A report from Dearborn relates that the lunch wagons which serve the automobile shops have recently added baked bean sandwiches to their menus. A more insidious form of provoking discontent among the workers could scarcely be conceived.

Not by chance did "a thousand on a plate" become the hash-house argot for an order of baked beans. Beans belong on a plate, preferably alone except for a hunk of pork and perhaps a dash of catsup. In New England, where the dish is the standing Saturday night order, certain queer souls prefer vinegar for flavoring and all, of course, demand steamed brown bread. White bread will do, but never in sandwich form, rather as a swab for the brown sugar sauce which is every self-respecting bean's Nirvana.

All flippancy about the unions aside, the baked bean sandwich is probably the work of a new demon at large in the world. Apparently he is bent on destroying one of the last remaining delights of man—the joy of eating. Germany recently felt his influence when fish hamburgers were suddenly added to the Nazi diet. This country had known him earlier. Only an enemy of mankind could have inspired the triple-deck atrocity with its toothpicks, cold toast and mucilaginous scoop of potato salad. He, too, must lie behind the fact that only by calling out the Marines can a ham sandwich be obtained today without a slobbering of mayonnaise on limp lettuce.

Pity the farmer. If he makes a large crop, he goes broke; if he makes a small one, he goes hungry.

"Anyone who whistles is a moron," declares a professor of psychology. Yes, or an optimist—which is about the same thing.

"We are perfectly willing to meet the Chinese half way," declares a Japanese government official. Half way through China?

In this country a murderer has 40 times a better chance to escape punishment than a person who parks his car beside a fire hydrant.

One Analysis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler has put himself at the head of the German army. He has done so because the army is about to do something that will alarm the German people. He's lending the army his prestige.

The army is going to move into central Europe. That's where Germany's interest is. The talk of colonies is camouflage.

The German army will move with Great Britain's approval. Italy and France neutralize each other, and don't count. Great Britain is getting a quid pro quo. It must be that Germany has agreed to let Russia attack Japan in the Far East. Britain wishes to see Japan given a beating, and the Japanese army is nicely stretched out to get it.

Mussolini knows about the deal and is already pulling in his horns. He's willing to take his regiments out of Spain now. As a sop, he and France will be given some of Africa belonging now to helpless European nations.

We're being brought in to help scare the Japanese and make them clear out of China without a fight.

Great Britain is the promoter. The bill will be paid by China and the small European nations. We'll get nothing. The loot of the British empire in the East will be postponed. THOMAS McMORROW.

Asks For More Police.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to stress the importance for an increase of at least 200 additional foot patrolmen for the Washington Police Department. Congress should enact legislation, speedily and promptly, toward granting the increase.

Our city, which at one time boasted of being law-abiding, seems to have undergone a radical change. Washington should in my opinion be a model for other cities to follow. It should take the lead, aim to set the example for perfection in every way.

In my opinion the police department under Ernest W. Brown is functioning under one of the most capable, efficient and best-fitted superintendents that has ever filled the position. HENRY F. ASH.

Citizen's Thanks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been much pleased to see along Connecticut avenue, near Cathedral avenue, and on Sixteenth street, new street markers which may be read at night from a car from 40 to 50 feet away. These glass, lettered signs are lighted from the street light which shines on them from the rear. The glass in some of them is installed at an angle so reading them is made easier. When such markers are installed all over the city, strangers, as well as residents, will have no trouble in ascertaining just what streets they are on, or coming to.

Whoever is responsible for making this useful change in street markings certainly deserves the thanks of all residents of the city, as well as outsiders who may have an easier time finding their way about the city.

I came to Washington in 1881, and have seen many changes. There was not an electric car in the world, nor an automobile, and not even a safety bicycle. More than that, a murder was a very rare thing, and a holdup I cannot remember happening. The Washington Monument had only progressed to that "high-water mark," where a different colored stone is noticeable. At its dedication there was one of the finest parades I have even seen anywhere. Florida avenue was the city limits, and a small horse car went up from it into the "wilderness" where Mount Pleasant now is. Barnum circus used to hold forth at Ninth and S streets northwest.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest and wholehearted approval the editorial "The Critics Are Confused," appearing in The Post of February 12. Its sound and tenable reasoning strikes forcibly and it was of such impressive nature that I clipped the same and am forwarding it to the Secretary of State. I feel that, if his attention has not otherwise been directed to it, he will appreciate reading it.

May I deferentially say this in passing: that no greater movement could be set on foot than one directed toward the election of Honorable Cordell Hull as President of the United States.

I have been a close observer of his policies for years and particularly since his incomparable service as Secretary of State. It is my honest belief that, from his record and the national and international esteem given him, no man could better direct the destinies of this Nation than he.

I believe with the initiation of an appropriate movement there would follow an incoming tide of approval of national import that would culminate in his election.

GROVER C. SHERROD.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thanks mightily for your editorial of February 12, "The Critics Are Confused." We need a lot more of that kind of optometric adjustment to bring us to seeing our relation to world affairs in proper focus.

Guard Chains Along Curbs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Among all the suggestions to reduce the toll of traffic dead and injured I have never seen mentioned one which is so simple I can claim no patent of it and yet which would seem to promise substantial results.

This suggestion is to have a guarding chain, supported on portable stands, dividing the street from the sidewalk on all the more dangerous streets or on all streets, with periodic breaks to allow communication between sidewalk and parked cars. As the city grows older a more permanent provision may be made along street lines which seem unchanging.

Statistics compiled by the department of vehicles and traffic of this city for 1935 show that over one-half of all traffic deaths represent (former) pedestrians, and of these nearly one-half occurred as the pedestrians were crossing the street "not at crosswalk," the most common form of jaywalking. It is upon this full quarter of all traffic deaths, as well as an additional number resulting from walking or playing in the street, and upon a large number of injuries, that a railing ought to show an important effect. Traffic Laws' Application.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent radio broadcast on the local traffic situation the full responsibility was placed on the shoulders of the motorists. That seems hardly fair when one considers the fact that regardless of laws against children playing ball in alleys and streets, roller skating, coasting, etc., this is allowed to continue. It is impossible for any motorist to avoid accidents when some child darts from behind a parked car.

The problem can only be remedied when the law is enforced equally between the drivers and the walkers. Lights are for the safety of all, but the wise use of them seems restricted to those who drive motor vehicles.

We might add by way of helping the cause along that the lights are spaced so one can only drive a block or two without stopping. Another thing, the speed limits should be raised. The wider spacing of lights and higher speed limit would ease congestion.

But whatever the laws are regarding this nightmare, by all means give the motorists an even break.

Individual's Contribution To Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One question which is uppermost in the thoughts of millions during these troubled times is this: Is there anything which I, personally, can do to help prevent war?

Since war does not come primarily as the result or the lack of armament, of legislation, of a sense of security, but from the operation of such causes as selfishness, greed, fear, it is quite possible for each of us to do his bit toward eliminating those qualities from his consciousness. The whole, after all, is no greater than the sum of its parts.

Of all the mental qualities which contribute to war, the greatest is probably fear—yet how rife does fear run today, how oft-reiterated is the conviction that war is inevitable and that the only thing that can be done about it is to put it off as long as possible! Excessive armament generally proves explosive for the reason that it feeds, never eliminates, fear. Yet psychologists say that habitual fear often helps to bring about the very result it dwells upon.

The elimination of fear does not come by pushing it to the back of our minds but by replacing it with positive facts. The fact that men of one nation do not hate those of another is verified by experiences in the World War, when soldiers killed each other without any feeling of personal animosity—as they proved when they fraternized in the first Christmas of the war. Suppose that we should all not merely sense, but positively affirm, this fact about each other—that understanding, not hatred, is the natural state of mankind? Such an affirmation is helpful because it is true. Belief in that which is not true brings about conditions which the world faces with dread.

Again, war is not inevitable because it is a backward, not a forward, step. History shows that civilization moves forward, sometimes slowly, sometimes by leaps and bounds. Destructive wars cannot assist that march: they obstruct it. Obstruction is no more natural to the law of civilization, which is progress, than it would be to the laws of the seasons or the cycles of the stars. If war seems inevitable, it is only beacuse we ignorantly force it upon ourselves.

It is the easiest thing in the world for the democratic nations to claim that if the three leading fascist countries would eliminate selfishness and greed from their programs, all would be well—and to point, in proof, to the disruptions which have followed their aggressive acts in the past few years. Yet even here we must tread softly—how softly most of us little realize. Like the man who must cast out the beam in his own eye before attacking the mote which is in his brother's we as nations must learn to acknowledge our mistakes and attempt to rectify them before real peace can be achieved. We must do away with the hypocrisies of recent years, which have almost killed the League of Nations and turned disarmament conferences into sorry spectacles. Each country must somehow put its own house in order, and there is no better place to begin than in the individual thought of each of us.

The elimination of war is neither an idle dream nor an impossibility. But wishful thinking can never in this world do the job. Collective action is an optimistic phrase, and it has possibilities, but let it not be collective action on the part of some to prove the rest are villains. Let it be collective action on the part of all of us to rise, however imperfectly, to the heights of adjustment and co-operation. This can be accomplished, but the first essential is the straightening out of our own thoughts. GLADYS PAVLAT.

Montserrat.

SPAIN, so they tell us, is a land of paradox.

War these days has lost its picturesqueness; it's largely a matter of drab, dismal, sodden death; and the Spanish - German - Italian - Moorish - French - Russian - British-Portuguese struggle is no exception. It merely has the added fanaticism of opposing ideas—which may exalt men's spirits, but not their actions.

And then, just at the very height of this bloody war, occurs an incident that is, in its way, paradoxical and is also picturesque.

The Spanish Parliament was scheduled to meet in Barcelona on the first day of this month, to ratify governmental decrees made since the previous semi-annual session of the Cortes in October.

The Spanish Parliament did meet on the first day of this month, but not in Barcelona.

Rightly enough, the 170 deputies had no desire to add their own names to the casualty lists the Italian birds of war were piling up in cities of the eastern coast. Furthermore, there were distinguished visitors from various European democracies who had come to Barcelona to show their sympathy with the Negrin government.

If the session had convened in the Catalan Parliament building in the heart of Barcelona, the temptation to Mussolini's bombers might have been too great. The Spaniards took no chances.

On January 31, newspaper correspondents were told the session had been canceled. That news was sent abroad. Then unofficial word was received that the Cortes would meet at the Catalan Parliament. But when, early in the morning of February 1, the journalists arrived on the scene, they were hustled into official cars.

Not until the automobiles headed out of town did the newspapermen realize that the Cortes was to meet "under such conditions of secrecy and in such picturesque surroundings as to make it unique in Spanish history." For the Cortes met in the Monastery of Montserrat.

If they drove out from Barcelona over the direct route to Montserrat, the deputies sped along a flat highway, scattering peasants and carts and dogs and chickens to the right and to the left. But soon they perceived far ahead of them a fantastic gray form arising out of the coastal plain.

The nearer they approached, the more unreal it appeared—this huge castellated mass of stone, jutting up from nowhere, crowned with jagged pinnacles and towers, with grotesque fingers pointing to the sky. A monstrosity not of the twentieth century, it must be an enchanted castle, the home of some legendary giant of the Middle Ages. Bombs and airplanes and machine guns seem, in such surroundings, to be the products of the diseased imagination of a sorcerer's mind.

If they were lucky, the deputies drove out to Montserrat on a cloudy day. Then they would have seen the lofty heights of the mountain wreathed in gray mists hardly distinguishable from the stone itself. A shaft of light would break through and illumine one rocky peak; the next instant, all would be gray, and dark, and forbidding. The swirling clouds take on a mystic significance.

It is not merely distance that lends enchantment. For, as they wound up the tortuous but magnificent highway that coils about the precipitous sides of the rock, the deputies could see at every turn weird shapes and figures molded in stone, and deep black fissures, and gloomy and mysterious caverns.

When they reached the end of the road, nearly 3,000 feet above the sea, the deputies found themselves on a small flat table, seemingly cut in the side of the rock. In this space are crowded the huge buildings of an ancient monastery.

The monastery itself owes its origin, of course, to a miraculous image of the Virgin, one of the most famous in Spain—visited in more peaceful days by as many as 60,000 pilgrims a year.

"Nuestra Senora de Montserrat, Patrona de Cataluna," a small black wooden figure, is said to have been fashioned by St. Luke himself, and to have been carried to Barcelona by St. Peter 1,908 years ago. In 717, the Moors invaded Catalonia (they were successful in that far-off era) but before they could destroy it, the image was carried by faithful hands to Montserrat and hidden in a cave, only to be lost for over a hundred years.

Then, late in the ninth century, one pious Gondemar, Bishop of Vich, discovered the image—but by no ordinary method. He was attracted to the spot, so the legend goes, "by sweet sounds and smells." Intending to take it off the mountain, the bishop picked up the wooden figue; but after he had walked a short distance, the image refused to move farther, and there a chapel was built to inclose it.

The chapel grew into a nunnery, and the nunnery eventually turned into a Benedictine monastery, and the monastery endured many vicissitudes, in latter days becoming famous for its production of beautiful books.

The role played a fortnight ago by the monastery of Montserrat, serenely perched on its lofty crags above the sound and fury of war, is not especially surprising—for Spain, so they tell us, is a land of paradox.

Chicago's Sportsmanship.

Chicago.

THOSE FEW Chicago citizens who do sometimes toy with the idea of reform, and wonder when a Sam Seabury or a Tom Dewey will arise in their midst to put an end to corruption and rackets, always come to the point where the citizens stand firm in defense of thieves and things as they always have been. Evidence is easily obtained in a city where graft has been respectabalized by time, and where concealment therefore is deemed unnecessary.

PEGLER.

In some European cities the sparrows are so tame that they hop about underfoot, and pick oats from between the lips of bearded eccentrics who sit in the parks all day. In Chicago, the grafter, a shy and furtive creature by nature, long ago was assured that he had nothing to fear from public opinion, and feels himself to be a pet of the community. Human beings may hunger for lack of a dollar, children may be robbed of their schooling in the name of economy and the city may appeal to Washington for help for those who are ragged and hopeless, but the man who would attempt to send a grafter to prison were no better than the monster who would hit the tame and trusting sparrow with a club.

• • • •

IF YOU LET the grafter and the labor racketeer understand that stealing and extortion are wrong and punishable, that is one thing. But if you have given them to believe for generations that their conduct is legitimate it is foul to trap them at their innocent play and humiliate their blameless loved ones with disgraceful accusations.

The sportsmanship of the people of Chicago has repeatedly rebuked such efforts by misguided zealots by turning loose highly respected grafters who not only were proven guilty by the evidence, but admitted their guilt in court. The people simply will not send men to prison who have been assured by public tolerance over a long time that it is their privilege to steal public money or extort money from union members and employers. If people are to be prosecuted for such conduct, then first they should be given fair warning that public opinion disapproves. And as long as public opinion distinctly does not disapprove, it is hopeless to try to convict.

These defendants always are men of personality and force, without which qualities they would not have been able to achieve prominence and power. Moreover, the familiar type usually is a home-loving husband and father, and sincere churchman, loved no less for his chastity than for his open-handed generosity to the poor and distressed. Stealing, with a gun, he regards as an immoral and sordid business, but stealing from the public treasury by overpaying for coal or paving jobs or, if he is a labor racketeer, by threatening to call a strike, is not sinful, because he does not regard it as stealing. Neither does the public from which the jurors are drawn.

SUCH MEN come along from humble beginnings to positions of influence and prestige and, as they grow older and their children reach maturity, a new factor enters the case. It is doubly wrong to prosecute a thief of this type when his son is going to college, or, his daughter is on the point of being married with considerable social fanfare in the society sections of the papers, because the young ones obviously must suffer, although they are in no sense to blame.

A Seabury or a Dewey could rise in Chicago tomorrow much more easily than Sam and Tom rose in New York, for there would be no problem of obtaining evidence. It lies out in the open. But the same men who brought reform to New York would fail in Chicago, because the citizen-juror has the last word on the question of reform. He is against it, and he speaks the almost unanimous opinion of a city whose people have not yet felt the pang of taxes, and, therefore, do not regard the stolen money as any part of their own.

Mr. Roosevelt once said that every dollar withheld from the tax returns was a dollar stolen from the poor, but the people of Chicago very correctly disagree. In their view and in their experience, a dollar withheld from taxes is a dollar held out from some grafter who is entitled to all he can steal, provided he does not demand more than there is, and come bothering them with summonses and foreclosures.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Dog Bites Winter Resort!"

Miami, Fla.—You've got to see dog racing to believe it. And even then you want confirmation.

• • • •

Four dog tracks operate in this area six nights a week for more than three months and they're all crowded nightly.

• • • •

You can tell a racing dog from a race horse from the fact that the dog is always muzzled and never is allowed to go to the post wrapped in bandages.

• • • •

Dogs have too much sense to race in a hot climate like this for fun so they make them chase a mechanical rabbit. Maybe the dog thinks it's a cat. On the other hand, you never can be sure what a dog thinks.

• • • •

There is no handicapping. The dogs start from scratch. It's a case of every dog for himself, with the rabbit depending entirely on the Florida Light & Power Co.

• • • •

Believe it or not, there is a paddock, a post parade and a theme song for every dog track. With four radio announcers giving their selections over the air during the dinner hour.

• • • •

The spectators gather in the paddock and cast keen looks at the pooches as if to make sure that each is alive and inclined to behave ethically. It is a curious sight to watch a red-hot fan stare at a dog to see if he looks honest and to observe the dog staring back as if to determine if the fan is honest.

• • • •

It takes nine men to get the eight dogs to the post. But the spectators come of their own free will.

• • • •

Which shows that the dogs are more skeptical about the whole business than the fans are.

• • • •

The betting is done at mutuel windows, but the big play is in the daily double and quinellas. A quinella is a ticket bearing the numbers of two dogs. If these two dogs are under the wire ahead of the other six dogs you win. And the quinellas pay anything from $25 to $1,000.

• • • •

Dog forms with complete records and charts are sold at the tracks but what you are doing when you pick a dog is merely guessing at canine ambition.

• • • •

But the fans bury themselves in the charts and think they are getting the upper hand over animal instincts, canine character and the law of averages. But it must be more honest than horse racing, because the State racing commission controls both and has no saliva tests at dog tracks.

• • • •

They even talk about improving the breed and all that thing. A real dog fan will argue for hours over the ancestry of a dog. But he will admit that the rabbit is always by Pushbutton out of It's-Nice-Work-If-You-Can-Skip-It.

A Visit To Nationalist Spain

Franco's Lines Found Holding Firm By Scholar.

Dr. Thorning, chairman of the department of social sciences at Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, is a close student of Spanish history and culture. He recently returned from an extensive visit to that part of Spain which is under the control of Gen. Franco.

By Joseph F. Thorning.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

AFTER A SURVEY of conditions in Nationalist Spain that extended from the Pyrenees to the Mediterranean, I am able to report upon three outstanding features of activity in the territory held and administered by Generalissimo Francisco Franco. It will be my own endeavor in this recital to draw upon the cheerful notes of a traveler rather than upon the overstuffed portfolio of a political analyst.

When I entered Spain at Irun and San Sebastian I was prepared to be greeted by the spectacle of a "nation in arms." We have heard so much about fascism (a term which Gen. Franco expressly repudiated in a personal interview with me) that we immediately associate it with the most extreme and odious forms of militarism.

Nothing of the kind is discernible in Spain. I saw more parade of military might during one week in Paris, in the course of the hotel and cafe employes' strike, than I did throughout my entire sojourn in a country in the throes of civil war.

San Sebastian Bathers Outnumber Biarritz Crowd.

THE BATHERS on the beach at San Sebastian were more numerous, if not more gay, than the boys and girls on the playa at Biarritz, its opposite number across the French border. To be sure, there were many refugios, or underground chambers, for refuge in the event of assault by enemy bombing planes, but otherwise the boulevards along the lovely Spanish bay gave the impression of the "Promenade des Anglais" at Nice in carnival time.

The flashing scarlet of the Carlist beret was set off by the navy blue forage cap of youthful members of the Spanish Phalanx. Gijon had just been captured and some of the victors were on leave in San Sebastian. The police force, I learned, was quite the same as had attempted to keep order during the few months when the Madrid government held the famous Basque watering place.

At the railway station in San Sebastian it is necessary to show a salvoconducto, or military pass in order to buy a ticket on the two crack express trains which provide daily service for passengers and freight from the frontier town of Irun to Seville, Spain, and Lisbon, Portugal. The Sud Express was my train, and, as soon as I was settled in my compartment, I found I had struck the rare fortune to be able to talk with people who had made their escape from Barcelona, Madrid and Valencia.

One young man, his wife and two tiny daughters related their experience in tracing their way through the mountains in their successful journey from Barcelona to Marseilles. And another youth, who had been employed as a jeweler's clerk in Madrid, related his adventures in the early days of the civil war. Airplanes droned overhead from time to time during the night, but the train roared past Burgos, Valladolid and Medina del Campo to arrive in Salamanca, headquarters of Generalissimo Franco, almost punctually at 7:30 in the morning.

One crazy taxicab met the train. Six of us piled in and zigzagged to the Grand Hotel. With profuse apologies the concierge explained that every room had been occupied for weeks. Nobody else seemed to be awake. Later a frank, young Carlist officer confided in me:

"That is one national vice we must overcome in Spain: late rising. We retire at two or three in the [illegible] sham battles in the [illegible] of every meal [illegible] tary slogan. [illegible] with social significance."

Just as I settled down for breakfast, the sirens sang out, warning of an air attack. No one stirred. The cathedral and church bells interpolated their harmony. A few women and children, pale with terror and clutching their most precious possessions to their breasts, rushed panic-stricken into the refugios. Senor Sanchez Sorrondo, ace correspondent of La Nacion, the famous daily newspaper of Buenos Aires, looked at me curiously and inquired:

"Are you planning to descend behind the sandbags?"

Scanning the sky with an anxious eye, I counter-queried:

"What about you?"

Chance Of Bomb Injury Calculated 1 In 10,000.

DURING the next four months I heard the piercing wail of the siren in Toledo, Merida, Avila, Seville and Malaga. Invariably remembering the serenity of Sanchez Sorrondo, I entrusted myself to the defending barks of anti-aircraft guns and discovered the truth of the advice later imparted by Mr. Richard Sheepshanks (who was the unlucky target for artillery fire at Teruel), who assured me:

"There's merely one chance in 10,000 that the bomb will strike you. After all, how often have you been hit by lightning?"

It was with genuine regret that I read of the death in line of duty of this plucky representative of Reuter's. It was he who enlightened me upon much of the inadequacy of the war reporting from the Nationalist zone when he gently remarked:

"What can one boy without a bicycle do in trying to provide coverage to the outside world with respect to all the happenings in this immense territory between the mountains and the sea?"

My second impression of Spain is concerned with the military campaign. On my ride to the Madrid front at University City (often cut off from the main body of Franco's army, yet never in the slightest danger of isolation) I was able to see the meticulous care with which antiaircraft batteries, field radio stations and telephone services had been established by German experts.

More than once I spoke to these men, for the most part youthful, reticent, dutiful, and learned from their terse replies that they would be the first to welcome the end of conflict. The youth of this generation have few illusions about the glories of war.

Italian Blackshirts Met In One Adventure.

DID I see the Italian Blackshirts? I will mention one encounter that was not without its humorous aspects. Mr. Sanchez Sorrondo and myself were motoring along the battlefront from Merida to Seville. During the late afternoon hours we were hailed by an infantry captain, a native of Almeria and a lawyer by profession, who was on leave and wanted to visit his wife and children in the Andalucian Capital. Our chauffeur, waiving a technical regulation, offered him the hospitality of our Ford sedan.

On the left of the splendid macadom highway, within easy range of the hostile artillery, were simple, hard working peasants harvesting the grain. Women were washing the family clothes in streams much in the same fashion of the Spaniards in the days of Cervantes.

At some of the crossroads silent, serious members of the Civil Guard would examine our passes and permit us to continue our journey, occasionally reassuring our chauffeur [illegible] had been imprisoned in Barcelona for four months and had been released only upon urgent representations of the American consul that the road ahead did not [illegible] though any territory [illegible] my! I could see that [illegible] did not relish the thought of a period of confinement [illegible] have more thrilling adventures [illegible] night!

Just at night [illegible] Guard at a little village [illegible] north of Seville notified [illegible] Queipo de Llano, who [illegible] to interview the next [illegible] given orders to close the [illegible] traffic. It seems that a hardy [illegible] of guerrilla fighters on the Valsequillo side had been able to filter through the mountains and, although helpless in the daylight, were preying upon motor parties of civilians during the hours of darkness.

Five persons had been machine-gunned the previous evening and clarified the general's instructions. Fortunately, our captain of infantry prevailed on the Civil Guard to let us proceed. Twenty miles in the gathering dusk with the mountains towering in a giant circle, the chauffeur throwing the car into second gear on the hills and speeding on every turn to avoid a surprise volley from some hidden machine-gun nest was an experience to refresh the most hardened newspaper correspondent!

At Santa Olalla the whole town swarmed out to meet us. "Impossible to proceed!" declared the captain of the Civil Guard. "The last order from Gen. Queipo de Llano was peremptory." (He didn't use just that word, but it was the Spanish equivalent.)

Disconsolately, with dreams of clean sheets and a table d'hote dinner dissipated, we tumbled out of the Ford only to encounter a smart sports cabriolet with an Italian officer at the wheel. His expressions were vehement:

"But how can I remain here all night? She is waiting for me in Seville! One never disappoints a lady."

Nevertheless, he tarried in Santa Olalla and next morning, like ourselves, rose early to greet what many Spaniards call the dawn in the "Pearl of Andalusia."

Seville Found Serene Despite Nearby Fighting.

SEVILLE ITSELF, of course, was superbly at peace—except for the dimmed lights at night for fear of air raids. Dining in the patio of the Andalucia Palace Hotel, surrounded by handsome men and beautiful women in evening attire, with the orchestra playing the popular airs of Paris and New York, one would never have imagined that a few hours north and east there were soldiers watching each other over gleaming bayonets and miles of trenches bristling with machine guns and hand grenades.

In Malaga it was another story. Only six months had elapsed since the expulsion of the enemy. Large sections of the business district (including the much-cherished American Express office) were in ruins. Mile after mile of residences were scarred with smoke and dynamite. The enemy was most dangerous and destructive when in full retreat. Every family had its black band of mourning. From Mr. Edward J. Norton, formerly chief of personnel (foreign service) of the United States Department of State, I heard details of the days of the red terror. The tangible proofs were all about me.

Every altar in the cathedral had been sacked. Workmen were busy in repairs in each church. Some were closed; the destruction had rendered the edifices unsafe. The graves of 263 of the city's 375 priests were fresh with flowers and hastily erected wooden memorials. It reminded me of the tomb of Father Miguel Augustin Pro in the Dolores Cemetery of Mexico City.

Bilbao was bright and happy compared to Malaga. To be sure, the bridges over the Nervion had been destroyed. But the Hotel Torrontegui, where the Asturian miners had not left a single bottle of wine upon evacuation, was once more able to supply the sparkling sherry, Jerez de la Frontera. At midnight one was safer and more tranquil than in the Chicago Loop.

Franco's Lines Found Intact After 19 Months.

THIS IS Gen. Franco's record during 19 months of victorious war. Foreign Policy

By Barnet Nover.

What Is The Discussion All About?

IN HIS REPLY to Congressman Ludlow, Secretary Hull declared that in its foreign policy the United States today occupies a middle-of-the-road position between "extreme internationalism, with its political entanglements," on the one hand, on the other hand "extreme isolationism, with its tendency to cause other nations to believe that this Nation is more or less afraid."

Thus, while avoiding any alliance or entangling commitments, the Secretary went on to say:

". . . it is appropriate and advisable, when this and other countries have common interests and common objectives, for this Government to exchange information with governments of such other countries, to confer with those governments, and, where practicable, to proceed on parallel lines, but reserving always the fullest freedom of judgment and right of independence of action."

• • • •

NO ONE who has been following American foreign policy with any degree of care during the last few critical years can deny that Mr. Hull's is a fully accurate statement of facts. But reasonable and straightforward as it is, it is doubtful if it will satisfy the more vehement critics of the Administration's conduct of foreign relations.

What in reality these critics want to know is not really what our foreign policy is, but what this policy is leading to. And since they decided long ago that it was leading to no good the answer given to their question is so much water off a duck's back.

Take this matter of exchanging views and information with other nations. It is certainly an amazing circumstance that Secretary Hull finds it necessary to justify this procedure at all. Nothing is more routine. For what other purpose than this do we maintain a State Department, send our envoys to nations near and far and invite those nations to send their representatives to this country?

• • • •

BUT THE CRITICS of the Administration's foreign policy are not worried by such routine matters. They are worried by what they feel is more than a routine procedure. With their eyes focused on the Far Eastern crisis, the gravity of which is emphasized not only by more than one sharp American note to Tokyo, but also by the decision of the Government to expand its naval armaments, they are afraid that conversation will lead to commitment, commitment to war.

To avoid war, therefore, they would avoid all commitments and to avoid all commitments they might go so far, if they had their way, as to prohibit all conversations. But this is logic run riot. If carried out to its drastic conclusion it would be a degree of isolation never dreamed of even by self-professed isolationists.

What these critics forget is that when the present Far Eastern crisis began the United States was by no means free of commitments. On the contrary, it had many of them. It was committed to the maintenance of the Nine-Power Treaty, signed at our instigation. It was committed to the doctrine of the Open Door and the maintenance of the territorial and administrative integrity of China, to both of which principles that treaty gave international sanction. It was committed to the Briand-Kellogg pact outlawing war as an instrument of national policy. It was committed by a century and a half of history, by its position as a great power, by material and spiritual interests in the Far East not meekly to scuttle and run at the boo of every war-hungry military machine.

• • • •

THESE COMMITMENTS, unless they were all to be scrapped, inevitably led to certain acts of policy.

We protested to Japan regarding the infringement of our rights in China, to attacks on our citizens, to the bombing of the Panay and to other acts injurious to our interests in the Far East.

We also sought once again as repeatedly during the past three years to persuade Japan to join forces with us and with other nations in making possible some measure of limitation with respect to naval armaments that might inhibit the dangerous race in such armaments, which now appears inevitable.

Every one of the moves made by the United States in the Far East since the present undeclared war began is wholly and completely explainable in terms of long-standing policy and without reference to the wishes and interests of any other power.

But since the interests of Great Britain and France were equally imperiled by actions of Japan, they acted in a manner not dissimilar from our own. Thus the United States and Great Britain, and to some extent, France, have proceeded on parallel lines.

It is this which isolationists find threatening. There is something ominous, as they see it, in the circumstance that the United States and Great Britain are presenting a common front to Japan even though that common front is the result, not of any alliance, but of two independent policies that happen to coincide.

The likelihood that if the United States had been forced to act in solitary splendor our protests and warnings to Japan would have had less force than they did by being paralleled by protests and warnings from Great Britain does not concern them. Many of them favor a scuttle-and-run policy anyway.

• • • •

TO WORK out in advance a foreign policy capable of coping with every exigency has never been possible for any nation. It is much less so now in the present disordered state of the world.

In its foreign relations every government must perforce live from hand to mouth, now moving forward, now backward, now to the right, now to the left, as circumstances demand. Only the broad lines of policy can be fixed. But this is not enough for those who insist on the absolute certainty that these policies, though interpreted and executed by mere humans and in a constantly changing [illegible]

Tom McCarthy

Wonder Boy!

HE'S the wonder boy! He's a genius! Everybody says so. He's 22 years old. And he is one of the great things that have happened to the American theater. He's Orson Welles. And he has hit plays running in New York. He plays the part of "The Shadow" on the radio.

McCARTHY.

But when I met him he lumbered out of Tom Power's dressing room at the National Theater and said, "Let's go out and have a drink."

I'd heard of Orson Welles. He founded the Mercury Theater in New York. He's only 22 years old. And he's written a text-book on Shakespearian drama. A play he directed, "Julius Caesar," is playing at the National Theater this week.

You've probably read about him. He's big time in New York. He's a genius! But he's only 22 years old.

Well, he lumbered out of the dressing room, and maybe he looked like a genius, but he was more fun interviewing then anyone I've met because he was also plenty regular. He's a big fellow, for all his 22 years. He probably weighs more than 220 pounds. And he wears his hair long.

"You're sort of fat," I said.

"Hell, no," he said. "I'm chunky."

And then the wonder boy, who has long hair ("dont be a dope. I grew it for the part of Brutus in our New York production," he said) told me that he'd been fatter when he was 15. And there's a story!

• • • •

"MY PARENTS were dead," he said. "I had some money so I took a boat and landed in Ireland. My ticket read Scotland . . . but I liked Ireland! Dirty, English Protestant that I am . . . I liked Ireland! I was 15 then. I was fat then. I was trying to paint. I was flashy . . . but I stunk. I couldn't paint!"

"What happened?" I asked.

"Well," he said, "I got down to my last $10!" We understood each other perfectly.

"There wasn't much to do," he said, "except to make some money. So I went around to the Gate Theater and told that I was an American star, willing to do a guest performance."

"The Irish are crazy," said Orson Welles, 22-year-old wonder boy of the American theater. "They took me at my word! I started out in starring parts." He neglected to say that he was 15 at the time.

"And I talked with a deep bass voice," he said.

"Well," he said, "I became a star in Ireland at the age of 15 and was demanded in London at 16." But there was no boasting in his telling of the story. It was merely a case of a big personable chap, telling a swell story and too busy in the telling to leave out the personal pronoun. After all, why spoil a good story with explanation?

After Ireland he went to London. They wanted him. But he wanted America. And then he landed in New York. There again he broke the tradition of Horatio Alger, jr.

"I couldn't even see a producer," he said. "I was Orson Welles in London and Dublin, but it didn't mean anything in the United States." So, he went to Africa. Why not?

• • • •

IT WAS a year later at a cocktail party in the United States that a guy came up and said "You're Orson Welles?"

"Boy I felt good," said the wonder boy. "I'd been recognized." He had been recognized. The guy who inquired was Thornton Wilder, who wrote the "Bridge of San Luis Rey!"

Apparently Kate Cornell had been looking for him to play Mercutio, in her "Romeo and Juliet," and so Orson Welles, teen age and all, came out of retirement.

"I'd like to establish the greatest reportoire theater in the world," he said. "I'd like to come to Washington in 20 years and have it so that you wouldn't have to ask about the Mercury Theater. I want it known. I mean I'd want it so that you would know all about it." He didn't mention the French Opera Comique . . . but that was the idea.

"You're better than most interviewers," he said. "Your questions haven't been silly . . . or intellectual. You know, they ask me intellectual questions and I don't know what the hell they're talking about. I wrote a book on Shakespeare . . . but I read him. And they get me addressing college classes . . . and I've had four grades of grammar school. Of course, I read things."

And Orson Welles, producer of "Shoemaker's Holiday," "Julius Caesar" (in modern dress) and wonder boy of the American theater, dipped his round face into his beer and said, "Boy, I'm an illiterate son-of-a-gun!"

Innocent Bystanders

By J. L. Brown

Harassed Witnesses.

ONE OF THE most bizarre twists to the fight on crime in the United States is the havoc created among innocent bystanders. Thumb through the statute laws of any State and you will find listed no such criminal offense as "material witness." Yet annually, thousands of supposedly free Americans are harassed, jailed or required to furnish bail for the heinous crime of having been present—or being suspected of having been present—during the commission of a felony.

Witnesses receive no special consideration, and are confined in the county jail like any felon. What this means may be gathered from a recent report of Federal inspectors. Not one of the 3,000 county jails in the United States approaches Government standards; many are dens reminiscent of the middle ages. In these nightmarish places where vermin crawl, rats scurry, spiders weave their webs and sanitary equipment is lacking, persons innocent of any crime whatever are housed side by side with other prisoners, many of them diseased or insane.

And when the case is called in court, the witness is likely to take more of a verbal lashing from the defense attorney than the accused will suffer at the hands of the prosecutor.

his charm. King George V gave him a handsome pair of cuff links, a token of his delight at the Virginian's stories.

Announced Wilson Death.

It was Grayson who gave out the dread news of President Wilson's breakdown at Wichita, Kans., during the League of Nations fight in 1919. And five years later, it was Grayson who, standing on the steps of the Wilson home on S street, announced that the War President was dead.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who had known Grayson for a quarter of a century, made him chairman of the inaugural committee in 1933, and later appointed him chairman of the American Red Cross. In this latter post, Grayson performed notable service, particularly in the great floods of 1936 and 1937.

Won Phi Beta Kappa Key.

Cary Grayson was born at Salubria, Culpeper County, Va., October 11, 1878. He was the son of John Cooke Grayson, a country doctor, and Adelena Pettus Grayson. His father died when he was a boy. Though the financial way thereafter was anything but smooth, young Grayson managed to take a pre-medical course at William and Mary College, where he won a Phi Beta Kappa key. Thereafter he attended the University of the South, at Sewanee, in Tennessee, and the Medical College of Virginia, in Richmond.

He served as an interne at Columbia Hospital in this city in 1902-1903 and then won a commission in the Navy as acting assistant surgeon. He was stationed at the Naval Hospital here for two years, after which he went to sea on the U. S. S. Maryland.

About this time President Theodore Roosevelt decided to show off the American fleet, and young Grayson sailed around the world. Upon his return he was detailed as surgeon of the presidential yacht Mayflower. Thus came about his meeting with T. R. and the beginning of a career unique in American naval history.

Rode Often With T. R.

In Grayson, T. R. found a man who shared his love for horses and dogs and birds. They began riding together, usually through Rock Creek Park. Gradually the rides became longer until, finally, the lusty Teddy and his young sailor-horseman rode 90 miles to Warrenton, Va., and back.

Roosevelt made this notable ride to prove to high-ranking and sometimes fleshy Army officers that he hadn't asked them to do anything that he couldn't do himself. T. R. had been warring on the "desk-riders" in the War Department, and insisting that ability in the saddle was a test of physical fitness.

In the next administration, Grayson encouraged William Howard Taft to ride and play golf, and he was credited with taking many pounds off that jolly President's huge bulk.

On the day that Woodrow Wilson was inaugurated for his first term—March 4, 1913—the first Mrs. Wilson suffered a minor but painful accident. Grayson was the only member of the White House medical staff who had not been lured away by the excitement out on Pennsylvania avenue.

Promotion Caused Fight.

Grayson attended Mrs. Wilson and she was so much impressed by his skill and his manner that she recommended him to the President. The result was that the 35-year-old naval officer was designated as the head of the White House medical staff—"the personal physician to the President of the United States."

In August, 1916, President Wilson promoted Grayson from lieutenant commander to rear admiral and medical director, thereby precipitating a bitter controversy on Capitol Hill. According to the "inside" story told at the time, Mrs. Wilson was responsible. During her last illness, she asked Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels to give Grayson a rank commensurate with his responsibilities as personal physician to the President. Daniels, after getting advice from the judge advocate general affirming the legality of such a move, recommended that Grayson be made a rear admiral and medical director and Wilson sent the nomination to the Senate.

Republicans in the Senate, led by Lodge and Weeks, of Massachusetts, fought the nomination. They pointed out that the 38-year-old Grayson had been [illegible] during the preceding nine years.

Admiral Was Confirmed.

They argued that Grayson had been out of touch with the Navy, and was not deserving of the promotion. Wilson was running for a second term at the time, and the Grayson case was made a political issue by many. In the end, after a number of other nominations had been held up by the controversy, Grayson was confirmed, but by a strictly partisan vote.

In 1919-20 Admiral Grayson became the center of another controversy. There were complaints in and out of Congress that he was concealing the true physical condition of President Wilson. Grayson remained silent. He had promised Wilson that he would not let the country know that he was paralyzed and in danger of death and he stuck to his word.

$5,547 in Jewels Lost by Traveler Who Visited Here

Travelers who leave hairbrushes behind will sympathize with Edward S. Perot, of New York City, who misplaced $5,548 in jewelry some place between here and there.

He told police last night he brought the jewelry when he came to Washington January 31 to visit Henry C. Morris, of Tilden Gardens. When he got home February 2, it wasn't in his suitcase. Whether it was mislaid or stolen in either city or along the road, he didn't know.

Police were told the collection contained a platimum and diamond ring valued at $2,500, two bracelets valued at $1,000 each and a third bracelet, $900.

Taxis, Buses, Cars In Minneapolis All Tied Up by Strikes

Minneapolis, Feb. 14 (AP).—Minneapolis was without public conveyance tonight because of a labor dispute. The last street car was pulled into the barns before 6 p. m. Buses on both local and Minneapolis-St. Paul lines had ceased running hours earlier. In St. Paul, only a few street cars were operating tonight.

The result, particularly in Minneapolis where taxicabs were off the streets because of a strike started Friday, was the stranding of thousands of persons in the loop. Private automobiles created the worst traffic jam in the city's history.

Meanwhile, city officials and union and street railway officers sought to end the tie-up that followed a company order placing one street car line on a full-time, one-man basis.

Navies Too Large, Says Adm. Hepburn

San Francisco, Feb. 14 (AP).—Rear Admiral A. J. Hepburn declared here today he believed armies and navies of all world powers were double what they should be. He said many naval men shared this view.

"But I think we have not seen the end of arms limitation conferences. There will be more of them and much could be accomplished in that way."

Welfare Work In Venezuela Grows Rapidly

Katharine Lenroot Reports on Her Visit to Country and Praises Progress.

Welfare work in Venezuela has progressed to such a point that wealthy parents are advised to dress their sick child in rags if they want an appointment with the country's leading tuberculosis specialist, says Katharine F. Lenroot, head of the Department of Labor's Children's Bureau, who returned yesterday from South America.

Miss Lenroot visited Venezuela as an honorary member of the country's first child welfare congress. Describing the experience to her staff yesterday afternoon, she expressed amazement at the rapid growth of Venezuela's child and maternal welfare program, begun only three years ago.

Slow to Realize Need.

"The people say they cannot understand why they were so slow to realize the need," she said. "We were asleep during the 20 years of Gomez's administration and are just waking up," is their only explanation."

The movement is headed by a group of young doctors who were sent abroad several years ago, under the Gomez regime, to study specialized subjects. When they returned they set up polyclinics, patronized by paid patients.

The proportion of free patients has grown since Gomez's death until now the specialists treat about half their cases without charge. An American doctor has been imported to head the Venezuelan department of education, Miss Lenroot said. A Cuban woman, trained in this country, now teaches domestic science to the native girls.

Roving Missions Set Up.

Ten roving "missions," manned by teachers and nurses, have been sent into rural areas to spread knowledge of health, household management and agricultural methods. A baby clinic with four branches has been established in Caracas, the capital.

"Puerto Rico serves Venezuela as a sort of transformer," according to Miss Lenroot. "It gets ideas from the United States, adapts them for use in a Latin American country and then transmits them to Venezuela."

The congress she attended voted in favor of a central child welfare council, which would co-ordinate health and educational [illegible] both public and p[illegible] direction of an

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 4.

IT IS a well-founded fact that however loosely some of our conduct in this great democracy is permitted to roam, our public entertainment is guarded with quick and alert eyes and ears. The stage and screen are watched closely on behalf of the nation's moral health, but they perform with practically unbridled license compared with the mighty young giant, radio.

ALICE HUGHES.

That's why an attractive woman in Radio City here has the leading headache job in the United States. Her name is Janet MacRorie, and her title is head of the continuity acceptance department, which is a cute way of saying that she censors the programs of one of the great chains at the source. It is her task to go through the scripts with a fine-tooth comb. Obvious off-color cracks and vulgar wheezes are no trouble—one slash of the blue pencile and they're out. "It's the double-meanings I have to watch with care," says Miss MacRorie.

The recent teapot-hurricane over the M— W-st-Charlot McCarthy episode was a fine case of migraine for everybody except little pine-skulled Mac. Apologies from all involved reached real hysteria, but no lasting harm was done. The number of taboos in radio is stupendous. Not only the public weal as a whole must be vigilantly guarded, but every section of the Nation has its aerial poison. What one part of the country accepts calmly, sends another into a towering age, and howls of grief and anger pour in by wire, mail and word of mouth. Poor Janet!

Her job has a thousand angles—racial, religious, tasteful, political, sectional and just plain horse-sensible. She even has to be certain that a program suitable for 10 p. m. [illegible] perhaps, is not poured on the wa[illegible] at dinner time!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I hope that your Valentines all crashed through in noble style, perhaps to the extent of a diamond dingle-dangle.

As predicted, the biggest traffic jam of the month occurred when Betty Compton Walker opened her fancy flower stand on Madison avenue! Her chipper husband, former Mayor Jimmy, was present, excited over Betty's venture and over his new job as a radio commentator. The shop was jam-packed, especially by such stagelights as Clare Luce, Gertrude Lawrence, Ethel Merman and Broadway's darling, George M. Cohan. Betty wore an orchid-linen smock with a Peter Pan collar, and her famous deep dimples—and she is said to have taken in $4,000 on the day. Nice work if she can get it! I emerged with two gigantic gardenias and a feeling that I had just finished a subway ride at the rush hour—save for a far sweeter aroma!

I found Grace Moore at my favorite beauty factory the other day, all excited and inspired after two hours of voice work with Mary Garden, once opera's delight. Gorgeous Grace is pretty much her artistic and popular descendant.

Mr. Franklin, of that same salon, suggests a compromise in the current war between the upturned hair-do and the pageboy bob. He suggests rolling the locks up in front and on the sides, and brushing it down into a smooth, low coil at the back, thus hoping to satisfy both battling camps. I think you have something there, Franklin, old comb-maestro!

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Music Committee of the Junior Board of Commerce and the Community Center Department present Hans Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra in the first of three "Children's Concerts for Adults" in Roosevelt High School auditorium.

Evidently members of the music committee of the Junior Board of Commerce were right in their assumption that a large number of mature concert-goers would welcome the opportunity to learn something about music in much the same way that the young people have been acquiring information at the students' concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra in recent years. The first concert of the series, given last evening, was attended by an assemblage of men and women that almost filled the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, and the experiment can be pronounced a success.

Hans Kindler, whose tact meets any situation [illegible]tely, modified [illegible]ture which [illegible] illustrated [illegible]ration. It [illegible] of musi-[illegible]ed his auditors and [illegible]n his lecture, which was addressed to that purely hypothetical thing, a collective intelligence devoid of all musicial knowledge. As he remarked, it is unsafe to take for granted the absence of connoisseurs from any audience, yet the occasion warranted that venture. It was, accordingly, to the unmusical mind, if such a one there be, that he addressed his elucidations.

His talk, fundamentally serious and enlivened with humor, was a rapid survey of the history of music from the simple stage of homophony through the development of polyphony and harmony. Burdening his listeners with only a modicum of dates and names, he sketched the evolution of simplicity into complexity, bringing that evolution down to the beginning of the classical period. The reasons for each successive stage were clearly explained.

Summoning the string players from the wings, he began his illustrations by conducting a siciliano by Manfredini and a sarabande in canon form by Bach as examples of early orchestral resources. The remainder of the players then took their places for the balance of the program, which consisted of the marriage procession from "Le Nozze di Figaro," the "Rakoczy March," by Berlioz; Smetana's symphonic poem, "Vltava;" two miniatures by Paul White and Dvorak's "Carneval" overture.

Before the final numbers there was a demonstration of the stringed instruments and a portion of the woodwind choir. For the relaxation of the audience was provided an interlude of singing, and the tentative start of "Columbia, Gem of the Ocean" swelled into a considerable chorus. The interest of the auditors and their frequently manifested enjoyment were good omens for the remaining concerts.

Prisoner Breaks Jail.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 14 (AP).—A dragnet is being spread today over Albemarle for Dickie Marrs, who escaped sometime today from the Albemarle County Jail. The fugitive was convicted in the circuit court here of simple assault and sentenced to 12 months in jail.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Realizing, at Eleventh Hour, She Doesn't Love Man She Has Promised to Marry, Girl Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 21 and engaged to be married in the near future to a boy of 28—one of the nicest boys I have ever known. We have gone together for two years but during that time, if either of us wanted to go out with someone else, we did so and told each other. There is no doubt in my mind that I do not care enough for him to marry him, and yet I realize it would be a shocking thing to turn back now. I do not want to make him unhappy, and it would hurt me considerably to break the engagement at the eleventh hour, but I would rather do that than take the final step and wreck both our lives.

I have a high school education and one year's business college training, while he—through no fault of his own—has only an eighth-grade education. But he reads quite a bit and has increased his general knowledge until he is as well-informed as the average high school graduate. But his lack of formal schooling makes him self-conscious and he lacks confidence. While we visit friends, usually I do most of the talking, which I don't like, as I feel it makes people think he is no conversationalist whatsoever.

• • • •

He is one of a large family of children and had to stop school in order to help support his family. He works in Baltimore, but lives in a small town with his family—paying them room and board to help them with expenses—and as there is no public night school there, he can't pursue further education by such means. At one time he considered taking a correspondence course of study, but friends talked him out of it, saying it was foolish to spend money that way. He does manual labor and during rush seasons is sometimes foreman, making $30 a week, and has little chance of advancement. The most he can ever hope to make in this work is $45 a week. However, he is much interested in the work and spends every spare moment reading literature on the subject.

We had planned to live in Baltimore, although I am employed here in Washington. We had planned, also, on me continuing in my job—going back and forth every day—and on his going to night school after we were established. I make about $1,500, and we had thought we could live on $30 a week, by budgeting closely. But, of course, we don't know whether all these plans would work out.

Do you think my having more education than he has would make for unhappiness in marriage? Neither of us care much for night clubs or things of that sort. We like movies and good books and all kinds of outdoor sports. Please advise me soon, as I am supposed to go to Baltimore in the next week or two to choose furniture.

CONSTANT READER.

Things to Consider.

DEAR CONSTANT READER: It is not uncommon for a prospective bride or bridegroom to come down with an aggravated case of the heebie-jeebies on the eve of the wedding day; but usually such panic cannot be attributed to any specific reason. Generally it is a vague and nebulous fear of the unknown, and childish reluctance to write "finis" to the chapter of carefree, magnificently planning youth. However, in my opinion, it is definitely a more serious matter when one person or the other realizes, in the hour of final assessment, that he "does not care enough to marry."

• • • •

In your case, with such a hard row to hoe ahead, with the man's educational and vocational handicaps yet to be overcome; with you an embryonic professional woman and him a pigeonholed and stalemated manual laborer, with every circumstantial factor conspiring to lead you along divergent paths, mentally, vocationally and socially, it is all-important that you love the man a very great deal; so much, indeed, that there would arise no thought of how hard life was going to be with him; but only the thought of how impossibly bleak life would be without him. I remember a woman's telling me once of how her fiance warned her: "I'm going to be hard to live with. I'm selfish. I have an ugly temper at times, etc," and of how she thought, as she listened, "Yes, I know you're going to be hard to live with; but, oh, how much harder it would be to live without you." Unless a girl can truly feel that way about the man she marries, she hasn't that margin of willingess to try and fail and try and try again, which pulls a marriage upward and onward along the high and rocky road to enduring success.

• • • •

The fact that you have more formal schooling than your fiance would not necessarily make for unhappiness in marriage. But if either of you is acutely aware of the difference, or supposes it does spell tangible or intangible inequality, and particularly if the man feels inferior in consequence, it would. The worst sore-head alive is the man who feels inferior to his wife. The only way such a potential source of friction and antagonism can be drained is for the wife truly to feel that in fundamental qualities of heart, mind and character, her husband is really superior. Only if he is really wise, fine, kind, understanding, intelligent, able and profoundly self-respecting, can they hope to reconcile this superficial disparity.

• • • •

It is problematic whether the man is inexorably determined to pursue a program of self-education for its own sake and its intrinsic value to him; whether he has sincerely dedicated himself to attaining some positive and admirable goal; or whether he is just playing with the idea in order to bolster up his self-esteem as a suitor and to sell you on the idea of his potential suitability as a husband. It is for you to decide what is the truth of the matter.

• • • •

In the meantime, I think you should summon the courage to explain to him exactly how reluctant you are to go through with this marriage, and for what reasons. It is the only fair, honorable thing to do. You owe it to yourself and to him. And you should give some thought to the children who might be born to the marriage. It is a tragedy for children to be born into a loveless marriage. If you are a "contant reader" of this column, as your signature implies, surely you have read here, time and again, painful case histories of persons who made mistaken marriages out of sheer lack of courage to say an honest "no" at the eleventh hour, and who would pay almost any price for the privilege of going back to that eleventh hour and breaking things off then.

• • • •

I think, at the very least, you should insist upon postponing marriage for a year, in order to arrive at a better substantiated understanding of yourself. Don't buy furniture until that task is a labor of love, and not a perfunctory duty and an inevitable chore. Don't worry about what your family and friends and office associates may think of your last-minute change of plans. Be concerned, only, in doing the honest and forthright thing, however painful it may seem in the doing.

M. H.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY will be paid tribute today by women throughout the Nation. In honor of her 118th birth anniversary, meetings will be held, wreaths laid, speeches made. On every hand those who have reaped the benefits of her long fight for woman suffrage will extol her courage.

• • • •

That is at it should be. Courage, especially the kind that will defy ridicule, is a rare trait in woman. But Susan B. Anthony should also be lauded for another great quality her sense of humor. Always she could laugh, always her quick wit could lighten the tragedy of her many defeats. The biographies of her, the histories of the woman's rights movement, all are enlivened by the humor with which she could survey the scene around her, including her enemies.

• • • •

As she left the Senate galleries in 1886 after the woman suffrage amendment had been voted upon for the first time—of course with overwhelming opposition—she smilingly remarked that she was grateful for one thing, that no mention had been made of Adam's rib.

Refused Roses.

On February 15, 1906, when she was given a great birthday dinner in Washington and many dignitaries, including the President of the United States, sent her laudatory messages, she remarked in what was her last public utterance, "I wish the men would do something besides extend congratulations."

• • • •

Elizabeth Cady Stanton, co-leader with her in the woman's rights movement had a gay and daring spirit of rebellion against the status quo in many fields. The letters exchanged between Miss Anthony and Mrs. Stanton reflect their impatience with and yet their humorous tolerance for the stuffed shirts of their period. They seem persons with whom the rebellious youth of the 20's—in fact of any decade, would have had much in common.

• • • •

One does not think of them tody as grim faced fanatical reformers, or as august and heavy handed club women. They never became saints or personages, thank heaven, but remained gay and valiant spirits. They are still so today.

Need of Tarzans.

LADY ETHEL BOILEAU, Scottish novelist, recently arrived in this country, says American parents bring up their children especially the boys to be "softies." She believes strongly she says that men should be rugged and ready for adventure and danger."

• • • •

This denunciation of "sheltering parents" has become almost a chorus recently, so it begins to look as though the inevitable reaction in child training might set in. Then of course sooner or later we will have the swashbuckling hero back with us to replace the misunderstood young men who need mothering.

• • • •

However, getting mothers to rear their sons to become red-blooded he-men is not so easy as it sounds. Paradoxically, women want to marry Samson's but they do not want to rear them. Perhaps they sense that there are too many Delilahs waiting.

The profile remains a point of interest on the hairdressing scene, and Paris coiffeurs are giving their attention to the contour of the head so that it may be set off to advantage from every angle.

Scorning waves and curls low on the neck, the Parisian coiffeurs brush the hair off the forehead, back from the ears and off the neck, then soften the severity with ringlets that fall into the natural lines of the coiffure.

In the daytime the curled ends are twisted into a long, slender knot worn high on the head, and for evening they are drawn up and curled to accent the profile line.

Bangs are being shown by some of the Paris hairdressers, but they are in harmony with the trend toward naturalness. No longer do stiff, angular bangs drape the forehead but, sweeping back, they are curled to form a frame following the natural hairline.

Navy Blue and Copper Favored Shoe Colors

Among favored shoe colors for early spring wear with day-time clothes are navy and copper. As the season progresses, novelty prints, many of them combined with dark monotones, will help to enliven the highways, while for warm weather wear some of the most outstanding styles are in tri-colored effects with a vivid contrast in the heel.

Heels, for the most part, however, are distinguished more for the variety of heights and silhouettes to be obtained than for startling color effects.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Wise Reducer Watches Her Vitamins to Save Her Health.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU FOLLOW a beauty diet to normal weight you will not have to worry about skin blemishes, wrinkles, edgy nerves—or where your next man is coming from. There is no longer any doubt that the foods essential to health are most important to beauty and the wise reducer looks to her vitamins.

For a long itme vitamins were scientifically as remote as the stars, but they have come down to earth with a bang. The scientists, of course, are not as interested in complexions as they are in scurvy, and they don't care a thing about glamour, but inadvertently these research workers have found the protective elements to have a distinct bearing not only on vitality and general health, but on the texture of the skin.

Positive Value Noted.

A lot of hokum has been written about the vitamins and you cannot blame the scientists for leaning over backward to keep their work on a scientific plane. They have been fair enough, however, to come out with the facts that an optimal diet will help us to stay younger longer and that it is an essential factor in that feeling of well being and radiant health which we recognize as the basis of all beauty.

While we used to value vitamins for their anti-this or that properties, we now appreciate these protective elements for their positive value. It is well to remember that you can plan your three daily meals to furnish the vitamins in the amounts needed for radiant health. The most effective plan is to choose the food sources which make the most important contributions to the diet. For example, although milk is not the richest sources of vitamins A and G, it does, at the same time, supply calcium and phosphorus, and these minerals are just as important as the vitamins.

The typical Reno divorce is streamlined.

Oils Should Be Added.

The known list of vitamins are A, B, C, D, E and G, and each has an essential place in the diet and a definite effect on the health and looks. Of course, there is not space here to elaborate on each one, but briefly here are the things to keep in mind: Vitamin A has been proven to build up resistance to infection. It contributes to the sense of well-being and to the youth of the skin. The food sources of this vitamin are butter, cream, whole milk and yellow and green vegetables. Of these, whole milk and green vegetables contribute most t othe diet. If, because of the lower calorie content, you use skim milk or buttermilk, then add a haliver oil or cod liver oil capsule to the diet for Vitamins A and D.

Vitamin B promotes the health of the nervous and muscular systems and, specifically, aids digestion and elimination. When we know that Vitamin B is found chiefly in whole grains we can see why it is so necessary for the reducer to have some whole grain bread in the daily diet. Brewer's yeast is also an excellent source of this vitamin.

Helps Health, Vitality.

Vitamin C is essential to the health of the bones and teeth and it increases resistance to infection. Vitamin C is liberally supplied in orange juice, grapefruit, tomato juice, pineapple and raw cabbage. You should have one glass of citrous fruit juice daily, plus a raw, canned or stewed fruit.

Vitamin G contributes to better than average health and vitality and helps to prevent skin diseases. This vitamin is supplied in eggs, milk, legumes, yeast, extract and lean meat. Of these foods, skim milk, whole milk and the green leafy vegetables contribute most to the diet.

The sunshine Vitamin D, which is the anti-rachetic vitamin, is supplied in cod liver oil, haliver oil and irradiated foods and sunshine.

A beauty diet for reducers offers 800 to 1,000 calories in these protective foods and is the basis of the balanced diet given daily in this column.

Longer Waists, Shorter Skirts Shown in Paris

Paris (AP).—Longer waists and shorter skirts are the striking changes greeting newly arrived stylists and buyers viewing the latest collections in foremost Paris houses.

The new feather hats take the form of white hens or black ducks with red beaks and tails in the air. Patou's new collection stresses the Moyen age in form-hugging bodices extending below the hips to meet short, pleated skirts just covering the knees.

Many two-piece dresses and suits also follow this design. There is a pronounced masculine note in strictly tailored three-quarter jackets for day wear and a similar styling for evening coats.

Mrs. Roosevelt Adopts Lipstick, Hint of Rouge

First Lady, However, Parries News Women's Questions About Make-Up and New Hair-do; Plans Speech in New York.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

A flutter of whispered comment rippled up one row and down the other yesterday when Mrs. Roosevelt entered the second-floor sitting room of the White House where a flock of newspaper women were waiting for the weekly press conference. The First Lady was wearing lipstick, and there was a hint of rouge on her cheeks!

Coupled with her flossy new coiffure, the make-up gave an especially pleasing effect, and the newspaper women—never backward in asking personal questions—soon got around to inquiring when she had decided to use it. But while the First Lady seemed mildly amused that her make-up and hair-do attracted attention, she declined to talk for publication about either and speedily turned the trend of the conference into other channels.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Her schedule not only for the next few weeks, but from now until the end of June is so heavy, she could scarcely crowd in another engagement, or trip. She implied this in reply to a question as to whether she would go to Puerto Rico for the opening of the Eleanor Roosevelt housing project in San Juan this spring. She said she had not been invited to go, but that if she had she "couldn't possibly do another thing between now and the end of June."

Shortly after being guest of honor at the luncheon given by Mrs. Homer S. Cummings yesterday, Mrs. Roosevelt was off to New York, where she will speak this afternoon before the New York School of Affiliated Workers. Tonight, accompanied by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., she will leave for Ithaca, N. Y., to attend functions in connection with the Farm and Home Week at Cornell University. She plans to stay there until Friday or Saturday and then will be in Hyde Park for a few days.

On Monday she will attend a dinner of the Dutchess County school teachers. She will return to the White House Wednesday morning and will have her next press conference at 11 o'clock on that day. The following night, February 24, she and the President will entertain at the Army and Navy reception, the colorful event that winds up the official White House social calendar for the season.

After attending the annual dinner and stunt party of the Women's National Press Club on Saturday, March 5, Mrs. Roosevelt will leave the following day for Texas, where her next lecture tour will begin. It will be concluded with a lecture on March 21 in Seattle, Wash.

She will spend a few days with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, and then will fly back across the country to join her husband in Warm Springs, Ga.—if his plans to take a brief vacation at that time work out. On March 29 she will address a group of rural women in Atlanta, and on April 3 she will be back at the White House.

Talks on Increase Of Naval Forces

At yesterday's conference when she was asked whether she believed the United States naval and air forces should be strengthened she replied she thought they needed to be built up to a certain extent . . . but just how much she did not feel qualified to say. She added she wished it were possible "to use the money for other things. But unfortunately," she went on, "we live in a world in which force is the only voice that carries weight for a great many people." She said further that she had always believed "taking profits out of war would be a very salutary thing" in preserving peace.

A guest at yesterday's conference touched on another phase of bringing about understanding between nations and thereby preserving peace. She was Miss Grace Frysinger, of the Department of Agriculture, who outlined plans for the next triennial meeting of the Associated Countrywomen of the World, to be held in London, in May, 1939. Miss Frysinger is North America's vice president of the association, which held its third triennial meeting here in 1936.

Now, almost 18 months ahead of the next conference, approximately 500 American women are making plans to attend the London meeting, Miss Frysinger said. In this connection she pointed out that conferences of the association lead to understanding between nations and may have a significant part in preserving peace. At the conclusion of Miss Frysinger's talk, Mrs. Roosevelt expressed her keen interest in the success of the association and the forthcoming conference, said she wished she could find time to attend—although she knew she could not—and added that she believed the arousing of interest in women in such an association was extremely important in bringing about international understanding.

Graciela Trucco Is Guest at Tea

Trucco-Benitez pre-nuptial parties have been filling the social calendar for weeks and yesterday was no exception. Feted by Miss Fina Tudela, daughter of the first Peruvian Ambassador to the United States, who is now in Washington on a mission for his country, Senorita Graciela Trucco, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, and her fiance, Fernando Benitez, were guests of honor at a tea, attended by friends from diplomatic and residential society.

Miss Tudela, who wore a frock of pale yellow crepe and unusual Parisian earrings, shaped like gold leaves, was assisted in receiving her guests by her mother, Senora de Tudela. The bride-elect was dressed in a simple black gown with a corsage of lilies of the valley.

Among those present . . . all nibbling away at Senora de Tudela's Peruvian cinnamon cookies . . . were Mrs. Matthews Hanna, striking in a red dress and red hat; the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes; Gerard Walravens, Second Secretary of the Belgian Embassy; Michal Budny, Attache of the Polish Embassy, and Larry Bungardeanu, Attache of the Rumanian Legation.

Others there were the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla, she in a green dress and brown hat; Miss Dolly Corbin, who rushed in from an afternoon canter in an informal riding habit; Mrs. William Powell, Miss Evelyn Walker, Mrs. Russell Snodgrass; Senora de Gaete, aunt of the bride-to-be, who has just arrived from Chile to attend the wedding Friday, and Mrs. Clifford Phillips, from Philadelphia.

Still others who gathered about the tea table were Mrs. Thomas Burke; the Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Ernest Schlatter; Miss Stellita Stapleton; Miss Junia Culbertson; Mme. Charles Lucet, and last, but not least, Senoritas Marta and Rebeca Trucco.

French Counselor To Hold Farewell Party Saturday

Jules Henry, Minister-Counselor of the French Embassy, has issued invitations to a reception on Saturday afternoon, from 5 to 7, at the French Embassy. About 200 guests have been invited to what will probably be his last big party before sailing next month to return to France.

Jacques Chilhaud Dumaine, recently appointed first secretary of the embassy, has arrived in Washington to take up his duties. The Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, will sail on Wednesday for this country.

Judge Walter Casey and Mrs. Anna Lee Touhy Walker, whose engagement was announced recently, were guests of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. J. Harold Kilcoyne at the Shoreham last night.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

"I LOVE YOUR beautiful Washington" is what diplomats always reply when interviewed on their impressions of the Capital. While no doubt most of them are speaking the truth, we nevertheless got an interesting angle the other day on how some of them feel about their work here in comparison to European posts.

DUDLEY HARMON.

"It's too easy in your country," remarked one. "If you want to find out anything about the Government, you have only to ask for the information and it is given you. Or else you can read the newspapers. But in so many capitals where the journals are controlled by the government, and nobody ever hears of a press conference, it can be much more exciting. Then you do your real work at cocktail parties and dinners, trying to worm out facts over the tea cups or hoping another member of the Diplomatic Corps will pass on something he has learned. But in Washington you go to parties mostly to be social."

We would much rather think of a diplomat as feereting out information over the brandy than by just calling on somebody and asking. It fits in much better with the interesting E. Phillips Oppenheim type, the sleek, suave individual who always worried about "the papers." Nevertheless, we think our friend will discover that despite handouts and such things, he may occassionally glean something at a party.

* * * *

SPEAKING OF the Diplomatic Corps, Frau Herbert Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy, will entertain at a small "ladies luncheon" Friday at her home . . . Willem Dirkse van Schawkwyk, Attache of the South African Legation, has only been in this country two months, but has already been ordered to Canada. There he will help organize the legation which his government will establish under the recent plan for interdominion representation drawn up by the dominions of Great Britain. He expects to leave Washington the first of March.

IT WON'T BE MANY WEEKS now until the annual rush of spring horseshows breaks out in the environs of Washington. One of the first dates so far is that of the Washington Horse Show (formerly called the National Capital), set for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 6, 7 and 8, as usual at Medowbrook, on the East-West highway.

The Junior League sponsors this show for charity. Mrs. William North Sturtevant, the president, has appointed Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., chairman of arrangements.

SAILING on the Normandie for South America last week, the Amory Carharts, of Warrenton, were subjected to a practical joke perpetrated by one Sloan Colt. When the ship was several miles out to sea, the Carharts went to their cabin to discover a cargo consisting of two white mice, two white guinea pigs, a duck and a cackling rooster. They found they would have to fork out $3 a day for the animals' upkeep and when the boat stopped at Nassau a hard-hearted customs officer charged the Carharts duty to get rid of the zoo. No doubt they will look for the biggest snake South America has to offer to take back to Mr. Colt.

NOW THAT "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is the chief topic of every dinner conversation, and everybody who isn't talking about it is writing on the subject, we wish to go on record as being warped, disagreeable, a wet blanket and lacking in humor. For years we have been subjected to dirty looks in theaters because we have twitched and yawned from boredom at the antics of Mickey Mouse, the "Three Little Pigs" et al, we hate those movies worse than anything, and are far from thinking that "Snow White" is the "best thing to happen since the Armistice."

So we don't want to hear anything further about the movie, please.

Miss Margaret Griffith, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Frederick D. Griffith, has arrvied from Louisville, Ky., for an extended visit with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Russell Hunter Griffith, of 2219 California street.

Mrs. Bankhead Is Honor Guest At Luncheon

Valentine Touch in Fete Given by Mmes. Ford and Colden.

A Valentine touch enlivened the luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Charles J. Colden and Mrs. Thomas F. Ford in honor of Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House. Tiny red paper hearts were scattered over the long tables at which the guests sat; the vases were filled with bright red carnations and at each plate was a scarlet box of candy with a place card attached.

Mrs. Colden and Mrs. Ford received their guests on the first floor of the Cogressional Club at 2001 New Hampshire avenue. The former wore a becoming black velvet frock with a clip of brilliants and a little black hat with a tassel, while Mrs. Ford had selected navy blue with which she wore a matching hat, feather trimmed.

The guest of honor was in her favorite black, and her frock was embroidered on the sleeves with white beading.

Delicious Luncheon Served to Guests

The menu was an excellent one, beginning with pineapple fruit cup, and going on to broiled chicken, fresh new peas and tender little potatoes. The luncheon was concluded with strawberry ice cream and angel cake.

Mrs. Bankhead sat at Mrs. Colden's right, and on her other side was Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, who wore a mulberry colored frock and matching hat with a veil. Nearby sat Representative Caroline O'Day, in her favorite black.

Since both hostesses are wives of Representatives, the Congressional element was well represented yesterday. Among Senator's wives there was Mrs. Edward R. Burke, who was all in brown.

Congressional Hostesses Among Those Present

The president of the Congressional Club, Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, and last year's president, Mrs. William M. Whittington, were both present. Other guests were Mrs. Will Rogers, Mrs. Nat Patton, Mrs. Maury Maverick, Mrs. H. Jerry Voorhis, Mrs. Hermann P. Koppelmann, who wore a gray outfit; Mrs. James I. Farley, Mrs. Buell Snyder, Mrs. Thomas O'Brien, Mrs. Byron Scott, who was married only a month or so to the Representative from California; Mrs. Charles Kramer, Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Mrs. Hugh Butler, in a purple frock with a black hat; Mrs. Consuelo Seoane, all in black, with a broad-brimmed hat; Mrs. James P. Wolcott, Mrs. James A. Meeks, Mrs. Chester Williams, Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Edward Moran, whose husband was formerly Representative from Maine and is now a member of the Maritime Commission, and Mrs. Clarence Turner.

In all, about 85 guests attended the luncheon for Mrs. Bankhead.

Mrs. Ralph Close And Daughter Are Luncheon Guests

Mrs. Ralph W. Close, wife of the Minister of the Union of South Africa, and her daughter, Mrs. W. S. Mann, were guests in whose honor Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower. Eight tables, each bearing covers for eight guests, were arranged at the east end of the Presidential dining room of the hotel. Pink roses were used as decorations.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Honor Guest

Mrs. Roosevelt was honored at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, at Ruthven, her home on Tilden street. There were only 10 in the company, as the hostess believes a smaller group makes for a more amusing party.

Since yesterday was Valentine Day, small valentine favors were placed at every plate, and the centerpiece of red and white carnations carried out the traditional color scheme. Mrs. Cummings used for the occasion a beautiful cloth of white silk and linen, with a design of sprays of yellow tea blossoms, which she bought in Czechoslovakia last summer. She also used a set of Bohemian glass in yellow and white, and the urn which held the flowers was one of this set.

Mrs. Fry and Mrs. Lowe in Demand at Many School Programs.

Dr. Philip Robin to Talk to the Henry D. Cooker Group Tonight.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A month of Founders Day celebrations is proving a month of speech-making for Mrs. Walter B. Fry and Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president and first vice president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers. Both of these officers and other members of the executive board as well, have been in constant demand for the programs held by the various parent-teacher associations in the city.

Yesterday, Mrs. Fry spoke at Powell Elementary School in the afternoon, attended the Whittier celebration and spoke at Kingman-Pierce in the evening. Mrs. Lowe spoke at Cranch-Tyler in the afternoon and at Edmonds-Maury in the evening. At Cranch-Tyler there was a candle lighting ceremony.

At Whittier, Mrs. Fry, the past presidents of the association and Miss Helen Nicholas, who was first principal of the school, were guests of honor. It is customary at most of the Founders' Day meetings to collect a free-will offering which is divided between the local and national organizations for their extension work.

Both Whittier and Wallach presented plays as their programs yesterday; Powell presented a pageant, as did Gage. Another of the celebrations was at James F. Oyster School in the afternoon, with Miss Catherine Watkins as speaker.

Tonight Mrs. Fry is speaking at the Blake-Gales-Seaton Founders' Day celebration and Dr. Philip Robin will speak at the Henry D. Cooker program. Hine Junior High School's P.-T. A. will give a Valentin silver tea this afternoon, and there will be the Founders Day observance of the D. C. Congress at the N. E. A. Building at 1 o'clock. Other programs are scheduled during the week by the various P.-T. A. groups.

February Marks Two Birthdays

The National Congress is celebrating its forty-first anniversary and the District organization its thirty-third. Both were founded in February.

Definitely pledged to work which will protect the interests and advance the welfare of the children, the members of the Parent-Teacher Association form a unique organization. Their chief interest lies in "co-operating with and not operating" the schools, and they are always alert to legislation, proposed or enacted, which in any way affects them. At present, they are making a concerted effort to defeat the rider to the District of Columbia appropriation bill which will place custodial employes of the school system under the direct control of the Commissoiners of the District. They are convinced such divided authority cannot be conducive to the best conduct of the schools. They had a large part in the repeal of the now famous "red rider."

Site for Hospital Is Opposed

The Parent-Teacher Association is also emphatically on record as opposing the proposed use of the abandoned tuberculosis school at Thirteenth and Upshur streets, as a convalescent annex to Gallinger Hospital. It believes this site is ideal for the new Wilson Teachers College, as well as the Dennison Vocational School for Girls, contract for which has already been let.

Outstanding work during the past year has been the dental demonstration project, under which teeth of children in elementary schools in the Fifth, sixth and seventh school divisions were inspected, defects noted, and a large number corrected. This project was carried out in conjunction with the District Medical and District Dental associations.

Clothing Supplied To Many Children

Student aid, as interpreted by the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, consists of supplying clothing to needy school children, the motto being to "keep the child in school." During the past year it has been necessary to clothe more than twice as many children as during any other like period. As many as 250 children have been cared for in one month, not only with clothing, but with shoes as well. The Congress is in the Community Chest for a "shoe and rubber" fund, which is earmarked as such, and can be used for nothing else.

Many of the local groups supply free lunches to the needy children in their schools, and hundreds of bottles of milk are given free to children who are undernourished.

Oregon State Society Honors New Senator

Oregonians Fete Senator Reames

Senator A. E. Reames, of Oregon, appointe dto fill the unexpired term of former Senator Steiwer, was guest of honor with Mrs. Reames last night at the dinner given by the Oregon State Society at the Shoreham Hotel. The Senator was not on the program for a talk, but was called on by Representative James W. Mott, who acted as toastmaster, and entertained his fellow Oregonians with news and stories of their home State.

Senator and Mrs. Reames arrived in the Capital only last Friday. Mrs. Reames is an attractive, gracious person, with gray hair and blue eyes. Last night she wore a gown of powder blue, the lace blouse made over silver, and the skirt of silk crepe. Her corsage was of orchids.

Representative Nan Wood Honeyman, who was also a guest, wore wine-colored velvet, with a brilliant ornament in her hair. Mrs. Donald Beelar, wife of the president of the society, wore a powder blue chiffon frock, with rhinestones trimming the girdle.

A brief business meeting was held for the election of officers. John W. Kendall was elected to succeed Mr. Beelar; Miss Pherne Miller, secretary, succeeding Miss Vella A. Winner, who is editor of the General Federation of Women's Clubs Magazine; W. L. Dutton, vice president, to succeed Dr. James T. Jardine, and Donald McClay, treasurer, succeeding W. G. Copley.

After the dinner there was dancing.

Susan B. Anthony Memorial Today

This afternoon at 5 o'clock in the crypt of the Capitol the annual ceremonies honoring the birthday of Susan B. Anthony, pioneer woman suffrage advocate, will take place under the auspices of the local branch of the Susan B. Anthony Memorial Committee, whose national chairman is Mrs. Robert Adamson, of New Jersey.

The ceremonies will be held, as is the annual custom, before the sculptured figures of the three famous American women, Miss Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott. Among the speakers of the occasion will be Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California, and Representative Herbert S. Bigelow, of Ohio. Miss Laura Berrien will preside.

The United States Marine Band Orchestra will play and a choral group will sing. Arrangements were completed yesterday by Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, assisted by Mrs. Horace Wiley Pote and Miss Merle Rhine. The wreath for the local branch of the National Women's Party will be placed by Miss Gloria Chavez, daughter of Senator Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico.

Katharine Warren, formerly of the St. Louis Municipal Opera, will be the soloist leading the singing of "The March of the Women" and "Forward, Out of Error," songs of the National Woman's Party.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

MEMBERS of the Newspaper Women's Club were entertained yesterday at a tea given by Mrs. Charles M. Lea, an associate member, at the clubhouse of the League of Republican Women. Mrs. Lea, after planning all the details of a pretty Valentine's Day party, was ill and unable to be present.

Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the league, received for her, assisted by Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Bertram Snell and Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, president of the Newspaper Women's Club. Assisting at the tea table—decorated in red hearts and red and white sweetpeas—were Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Kate Scott Brooks, Mrs. Sallie V. H. Pickett and Miss Margaret Wade.

Among the guests in addition to the "ladies of the press," were Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Warren R. Austin, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., Mrs. Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania, whose husband represents Mrs. Lea's district in Congress; Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, Mrs. E. A. Harriman, Representative and Mrs. U. S. Geyer, Mrs. James W. Adams, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Atherton MacCondrey, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Howard LeRoy, Perry F. Heath and Mrs. James Carroll Fraser.

THE BUSINESS WOMEN'S MUSIC CLUB of the Y. W. C. A. is having a concert tonight under its director, Mae H. Murray. Mrs. Margaret Garthoff will not only be guest soloist but will talk on Egypt, where she lived five years, and present several numbers in Egyptian costume.

MRS. HARVEY W. WILEY, president of the Women's City Club, who is on a world tour, has been in Burma, Java and Sumatra and expects to reach Cairo, Egypt, this Thursday. She joined Mrs. Frederick Farrington during the Christmas holidays and they are continuing their travels together.

MRS. ERNEST H. DANIEL, a past president of the Political Study Club, has received the indorsement of the executive board of the club for the office of president of the District Federation, of which she is now first vice president. Mrs. LaVerne Beales, a past president of the Petworth Woman's Club, has been indorsed by Petworth to succeed Mrs. Daniel as first vice president.

Mrs. Daniel, prominent both in club and social circles of the Capital, may meet with such general approval as a candidate as to be unopposed for the federation presidency. There is still time, however, for others to enter the race, and there are even nominations from the floor which can do things to any nominating committee's carefully prepared slate.

Mrs. Daniel is active in the P. E. O. and past president of one of its chapters here. She is also music chairman of the Political Study Club and, when Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, now president of that organization, served as president of the D. C. Federation. Mrs. Daniel was recording secretary. Mrs. Daniel also has been asked to be State captain for the District of Columbia Field Army for Cancer Control.

Two of the bravest men in Washington are the ones who appeared at a White House reception the other evening in dinner jackets instead of tailcoats . . . For tailcoats and white ties are, as the peanut vendor on the White House corner would say, strictly de rigueur at all White House receptions.

Quite a few more timid men in the Capital pay anywhere from $35 to $185 for a suit of tails which they wear perhaps only once a year, to the White House; or possibly on two or three other occasions.

Oddly enough, many a half-hearted socialite who spends $65, more or less, for his soup and fish uniform rebels at going the whole hog with another $10 or $15 for a high silk hat; and scores who go to shake the Roosevelts' hands edge into the east door with a plebeian derby or a casual fedora clutched surreptitiously in one moist hand.

"—they shy at the topper"

You can detect the approach of the No. 1 possibility for the Republican Presidential nomination by the delicate, almost but not quite impalpable, perfume with which the Senate barbers anoint Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan—one of the Senate's most urbane and courtly gentlemen.

• • • •

This fragrance is even more delicate than the aroma of Senator Ham Lewis' medicated cigarettes, which Illinois' Eeau Brummel smokes for his throat's sake . . . But not on the Senate floor, where smoking is banned during sessions. Occasionally you see a solon chewing an unlit cigar.

A middle-aged foreign noblewoman is bragging in print that the late Nick Longworth proposed to her before he asked Princess Alice to marry him.

That's what comes (think Nick's old cronies) of a foreigner's inability to distinguish between a proposal and—something that sounds very much like one.

So much gum is chewed in the House and Senate, however, that there's a faint aroma of mint, if your nostrils are sensitive. A tourist's child who has seen Congress in session would cock a skeptical eye at any teacher who asserts that gum-chewers can't grow up to be great men.

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: Because Holland hasn't recognized Russia, the sociable De Witha of the Dutch Legation don't go to Russ parties, and the amiable Troyanovskys didn't celebrate at the Dutch party the arrival of Queen Wilhelmina's infant granddaughter . . . At gyms and swimming pools it's apparent that Latin diplomats go in most for silk undies . . . Several embassies seem to have young attaches permanently assigned to keep the Capital's debs from going over to the enemy embassies.

Mme. de With.

"—diplomatic non-recognition"

In the New Deal heaven are many fist-fights brawls, rough-and-tumbles and battle royals . . . For example: Kennedy vs. Perkins (Labor); Morgan vs. Lilienthal (TVA); Ickes vs. Hopkins (PWA vs. WPA), and the newest three-cornered fight, Jackson (crackdowners) vs. Richberg (co-operators) vs. Wallace (planners) . . . No united front.

There is scarcely a bureau in the Capital without inner squabbles, nor a department or agency which isn't at war with another department or agency. And it's only natural; the New Dealers are a bunch of rugged individualists.

GILT OFF THE DOME: If Huey Long had become President, Congressman Mouton, of Louisiana, whose French is the best on the Hill, might have become Ambassador to France . . . But if Huey had lived, Mouton might never have become a Congressman . . . The price of planked steak and lobster salad has gone up a dime at the Senate restaurant since last year.

In a raffish mood official Washington likes to go to one of the waterfront sea-food restaurants, where the wharf aromas accentuate the marine menus . . . One host made the mistake of taking several lawmakers to a restaurant one evening which happens to be on U. S. property—ergo, no hard liquor was for sale . . . For a moment he seemed about to be left without a quorum . . . But he patched it up with sherry flips.

Citizens Ask Bigger Relief Fund in D. C.

Transfer of Control of School Custodians Is Opposed.

Increased appropriation for relief in the District was urged by two speakers last night at a meeting of the Kalorama Citizens Association.

Mrs. David Cushman Coyle and Mrs. Charter Heslep described their own investigations into relief needs here. They said greater appropriations for relief would result in a saving to the community by reducing the toll of sickness and crime.

The association adopted a resolution opposing transfer of control over school custodians to the Commissioners. They urged that Congress carry out the recommendations of the Board of Education in providing funds for development of the school system, and for adequate teaching staffs.

Hill Crest Citizens

Southeast Washington should have a monument and the proposed memorial to the late Guglielmo Marconi, Italian inventor, would be a good one to start with, the Hill Crest Citizens Association resolved last night. A resolution proposing a statue to Marconi has been introduced in Congress.

Other resolutions adopted by the Hill Crest Citizens approved restoration of the office of people's counsel, urged an appropriation for the Pennsylvania avenue bridge, affiliated the association with the District Suffrage Association in the fight to enfranchise the Capital, asked school board control of playgrounds after school hours, assailed proposed diversion of gasoline tax money and named a committee of five to study traffic conditions.

The association was addressed by Harry N. Stull, suffrage association leader.

Stanton Park

The anti-gambling bill of Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, now in the House, was indorsed last night by the Stanton Park Citizens Association, meeting in Peabody School. The association also indorsed District speed limits of 25 and 30 miles an hour.

Responding to a questionnaire from the director of public safety, the association indorsed pedertrian regulation, present parking rules, and limiting of the number of taxicabs by compulsory insurance. It opposed operating traffic lights all night, a law limiting the number of taxicabs and taxicab meters.

Transfer of playgrounds from the Board of Education was opposed. Harry N. Stull presided.

Piney Branch

The Piney Branch Citizens Association, meeting last night in Roosevelt High School, adopted a resolution urging removal of the wooden buildings on the old tuberculosis hospital land at Fourteenth and Allison streets northwest. The resolution described the buildings as a fire hazard.

Any decrease in powers of the Board of Education was opposed in an inclusive resolution adopted. The association also went on record indorsing the campaign to preserve the Stephen Decatur house on Lafayette Square.

West End Citizens

The West End Citizens Association last night appointed a committee to investigate need for a new building to replace that of the Grant School on G street between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets northwest. W. F. Wasson was named chairman, assisted by Paul Stweet and Mrs. E. E. Russell.

The association adopted another resolution endorsing a District sales tax on all commodities except food, medicine and inexpensive clothing.

Senators Studying 'Movies' in Schools

"If the people of Washington want their schools turned into nickelodeons it's all right with me," Chairman Thomas of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations, said yesterday, commenting on complaints against showing of commercial motion pictures in public schools.

Senator Thomas said he had been appealed to by representatives of motion-picture promoters that stage the shows during recess and lunch periods.

"I doubt whether there is anything the Appropriations Committee can do except to throw light on the practice and bring out the facts," Thomas added.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and other school officials have been summoned to appear before the sub-committee tomorrow to explain the matter.

Third Victim Dies Of Virginia Crash

Rosalie Harper, 16, of Falls Church, Va., died at Emergency Hospital last night, third victim of an accident on Lee boulevard Friday.

Two others were injured in the accident, which occurred a few feet east of the Fairfax County line. The other two dead were the girl's foster-mother, Mrs. Blanche Green, 45, and Frederick M. Amberger, 50, of the 4800 block of Potomac avenue northwest.

WILLIAM DER.

Suspect Is Held To Grand Jury In Soo Murder

The testimony of a Fourth Precinct policeman yesterday held William Der, a Chinese, for grand jury action in connection with the slaying of William Der Soo, 55-year-old Chinese laundryman.

Policeman William Hall told a coroner's jury he saw Der alight from a street car in front of Soo's laundry at 1405 H street northeast the night of the murder.

"I remember him," the officer testified, "because he kept looking at me and appeared nervous. I was standing at the front of the car and had a good look at him. He would stare at me for a minute, then glance away. I recalled his nervous attitude when I read of the murder the next day."

According to Mary Tesive, colored, an employe in Soo's laundry, Der appeared there Tuesday night and spent several hours talking to the proprietor.

"He (Der) asked me what time I left and I told him about 9:30 p. m.," the woman testified.

Der, it was further testified, knew Soo in Fall River, Mass., and went to his place of business Tuesday night to say "goodbye" before leaving for Chicago. Soo was found the next morning, dead in bed with a rope around his neck and ankles and stab wounds in the throat.

Police said the slaying motive was robbery. A large sum of money which Soo kept in his bedroom is missing, they said.

Symphony Seeks $125,000 to Meet Members' Salary

Largest single item of expense of a major symphony orchestra consists of salaries for orchestra members and soloists, it was revealed yesterday in a proposed budget submitted by the National Symphony Orchestra Association for the 1938-1939 season.

Drawing up a budget totaling $172,000, of which $69,000 will be accounted for by ticket receipts, etc., the association revealed that $125,500—or 73 per cent of the expense—will go toward salaries for members of the orchestra and solists.

Amount of the budget, which the association claims is the smallest submitted by any major symphony orchestra in the country, must be raised during the campaign period between February 23 and March 6 if the orchestra is to appear after the current season.

Airplane Is Used To Picket Italians

The picketing was done with an airplane flying high above the embassy and trailing a streamer bearing in huge letters the legend, "Quarantine the Aggressor." The veterans alos presented to a member of the embassy staff a letter demanding withdrawal from Spain.

Earlier in the day, representatives of the veterans presented at the White House an appeal to urge the adoption of the O'Connell resolution, which would limit application of the neutrality law to aggressods. Delegations also visited the Department of State and Representative McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House of Foreign Affairs Committee, in reference to 21 American prisoners held by the Spanish rebels.

Rep. W. R. Poage Weds Miss Cotton in Texas

Eastland, Tex., Feb. 14 (AP).—Rep. W. R. Poage, of Waco, Tex., and Miss Frances Cotton, of Eastland, were married here today at the home of her mother, Mrs. Frank Wilcox. Poage said they would leave immediately for Washington.

3 Assistants To Be Sought By D.C. Heads

Commissioners Direct Seal to Draft Law for Trio of Helpers.

Move Diverges From Prettyman Committee Recommendation.

Differing radically in the most important recommendation for reorganization by the Prettyman Citizens' Efficiency Committee, the one regarding departmentalization, the District Commissioners yesterday instructed Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal to draft legislation for the creation of three assistant commissioners.

The committee's recommendation, based on a 10-month' study, called for a director over each of the eight major departments in the District governmental setup.

Under the Commissioners' proposal, an assistant to each Commissioner would act as Commissioner during absence of a Commissioner and would also relieve the Commissioners of general office details and routines.

Hearings Are Opposed.

In recommending the removal of Budget Bureau hearings, the Commissioners regarded the advisability of sending the budget direct to the President, and not to Congress as the committee recommended. Both the Commissioners and the committee, however, would do away with the present Budget Bureau hearings.

The Commissioners' meeting yesterday was the first action upon the report since December 10, when the recommendations were submitted.

Corporation Counsel Seal was further instructed to send the drafts of the bills to both the House and Senate District Committees as soon as possible.

Police Change Sought.

Many other recommendations by the Prettyman Committee wer approved by the Commissioners and will be included in the new legislation. There include:

1. Park police should be made a division of the metropolitan police force.

2. The maintenance and operation of all parks, squares, triangles, etc., except the large national parks (Rock Creek Park, East and West Potomac Parks, the Mall and Anacostia Park), should be transferred from the National Park Service to the District government.

3. The records and activities of the Recorder of Deeds should be co-ordinated with the records and activities of the departments of the District government relating to land titles, such as tax records, surveyor's records, etc. To that end the recorder should be transferred to the District government, with offices located as nearly as possible to the District departments relating to land titles.

4. No change in the present appointment, constitution or operation of the board of education and the public school system.

'Only a Start,' Hazen Says.

Addition of one police court judge will be recommended by the Commissioners.

In respect to the recommendation by the Prettyman committee regarding the National Zoological Park, the Commissioners stated they would ask for 50-50 financing of the park.

The report stated that the appropriations for the Zoo, which is under the exclusive direction and control of the Smithsonian Institution, should be transferred to the budget of that institution.

At the present time the District pays for the entire upkeep of the park.

"This is only a start," Commissioner Hazen declared. "We intend to go forth with all the recommendations by the committee and send the legislation to Congress."

Commissioner Hazen believed that the assistant commissioner plan would be more efficient than the eight directors as recommended by the committee.

D.C. Meat Dealers To Meet Tonight

Joining in a national campaign to raise meat consumption, 1,500 Washington meat dealers and their employes are expected to gather at 8 o'clock tonight for a mass meeting in the U. S. Departmental Auditorium.

Speakers include Harry Brown, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Dr. F. B. Simons, director of Agricultural Extension, University of Maryland; Michael Keans, president of the Southern Hotel Supply Co., and Mrs. F. T. Northcross, home economist and dietician.

Hit by Truck, Boy Is Critically Hurt

William Cranford, jr., 7, second-grade student, was in a critical condition at Emergency Hospital last night from injuries suffered when hit by a truck in front of his home in the 800 block of E street southeast.

The truck was driven by Lacy Lowery, 22, colored, driver for a coal company in nearby Virginia, police said. He was held on an open charge.

William Spencer Bagdatopoulos, born in Greece of an English mother and a Greek father, was educated in Holland.

"That's really a funny thing, you know," he said yesterday at the Smithsonian Institution, in the midst of an exhibition of his water colors. "A very funny thing. I come from three of the smallest yet greatest countries in the world. It only occurred to me a few days ago."

Bagdatopoulos talks as fluently as he paints, which is something. "I once finished a painting in 10 minutes," he said yesterday. "At least, the people who clocked me said it was 10 minutes. Time is nothing to me.

"I was doing the fishing boats in Madras Harbor and there was nothing for it but to hurry. The boats moved from the wharf as soon as they unloaded. Besides, I could see a gray shadow racing across the water, which meant the sun was going."

Bagdatopoulos relates this tale against the advice of his friends. People tell him, he says, that Americans measure value by time. He probably would do better to say he spends three days on each painting, he thinks.

But he has Franz Hals and Rembrandt back of him. "Hals never spent more than 20 minutes on a portrait. He knew his subject would remain the same just so long. Better use six hours of energy in half an hour than spend six hours and end up with a different subject," he believes.

"I'm really a portrait painter, of course," he went on. "But you can't borrow portraits from their owners and shift them around the way you can water colors."

Despite his admiration for the light and color he found in California, where he has done most of his recent work, he finds America as a whole is not well adapted to his brush.

"I like to do figures toiling, you know," he explained. "They're still to be found in parts of England—in glassblowers, and so on. But here, if I may use a strange word, there's no more perspiration. You just have men sitting down and pulling levers."

Bagdatopoulos still is art adviser to the India Times, a position he acquired in 1924. That year he was given the assignment of painting India. He spent 18 months at it, but found the task of fighting angry native mobs away as he painted was a tiring one.

He took a vacation and then went into the wilds for another 18 months, doing landscapes, native types and everything else that he came across. So far as he knows, he still is the only white man who has penetrated the entire country.

He considers Duveneck our greatest painter. "Several years ago I visited the Corcoran here and saw a whole group of his paintings hidden away in a dark corridor," he recalled. "I went to the curator about it, and the next time I was here the pictures had been rehung."

The water-color exhibition will remain here through February 27.

'Drunks' Increased 12-Fold by Repeal, Dry Leader Avers

"Anyone who keeps his eyes open in Washington sees as many drunks in a month these days as in a year during prohibition," Dr. Everett M. Ellison, president, declared last night at a meeting of the District United Dry Forces.

The meeting discussed favorably a proposal that the suggested District farm for inebriates be maintained "at the expense of the liquor industry."

Other topics on the agenda included legislation for compulsory blood tests for all persons involved in automobile accidents and circulation of abstinence pledges among high school students.

First Lady Urges Better Facilities at Freedmen Hospital

Mrs. Roosevelt declared at her press conference yesterday that Freedmen's Hospital needs better equipment to train colored nurses and doctors for service throughout the Nation.

She pointed out that Freedmen's Hospital is one of two training centers in the country for colored doctors and nurses. Unless facilities are improved there, she said, interns and graduates who have served their apprenticeship at Freedmen's will be unable to meet District requirements.

Striking Drivers Face Duty Shift

Distributors of beer and soft drinks in the District moved yesterday to take sales duties out of the hands of truck drivers, as more than 100 drivers ineight firms continued their three-day-old strike for higher wages and shorter hours.

A. D. O'Connor, spokesman for the distributors, said last night one of the firms already had decided to confine its drivers' duties to making deliveries.

Both employers and strikers reported no progress had been made toward settlement of the strike.

Winter Due Back Today, but It May Not Tarry Long

Winter is again scheduled to replace the advance period of spring here today, according to the official forecast of the Weather Bureau which predicts a minimum temperature this morning of about 34 degrees.

Fair weather is expected to accompany the cold spell today, but officials said southerly winds may usher in more warm days before the week is over.

Climbing from a low of 30 at 4 a. m. yesterday, the mercury shot up to a high of 68 shortly before noon. A steady fall after noon found the thermometer registering 48 degrees at 10 p. m.

P.U.C. Given Plan For Power Deal

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday reviewed a plan whereby the Washington Gas Light Co. would purchase the Alexandria and Hyattsville Gas Light Co. from the Washington and Suburban companies, which control the three firms under a common trust.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the P. U. C., stated a public hearing will be called shortly.

The proposal asked the Washington investors to purchase preferred stock valued at approximately $1,212,700. It was filed first with the Securities and Exchange Commission, as a move to dissolve the Washington and Suburban companies in accordance with the "death sentence" clause of the public utility act of 1935.

A Dirt Scandal on Hill! Congressman Lost Wash

The Senate's great cleanliness debate had an echo in the House last night, though not in the course of politics.

Representative Thomas Flaherty lost his laundry. There was $2 worth stolen from the Massachusetts Republican's automobile parked at New Jersey avenue and S street southeast, his secretary reported to police. He said the loss occurred between 7 and 8 o'clock.

Co-operation Gets Blessing Of 3 Faiths

Protestant, Catholic and Jewish Ministers Address Conference.

Consumers' Plan Called 'Christian Mode' by Father Schmiedeler.

For the first time in the history of consumers' co-operation in America, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish ministers met on the same platform last night and gave their blessing to the principles of the co-operative movement.

The Rev. James Myers, industrial secretary, Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; the Rev. Edgar Schmiedeler, social action department, National Catholic Welfare Conference, and Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner, chairman, social justice commission, Central Conference of American Rabbis, alike stressed the "Religious Aspects of Consumers' Co-operation." Speaking at the Rialto Theater, they addressed a public meeting forming part of a two-day "Interfaith Conference on Consumers' Co-operatives and Credit Unions."

"Co-operation Called "Christian."

Assailing "individualistic capitalism" as creator of a situation where "practice of the moral law is abnormally difficult," Father Schmiedeler maintained that "co-operation is the Christian mode of industry."

He held that "capitalism stimulates greed, gluttony and lust for power, while co-operation subordinates the profit motive and emphasizes mutuality and the common good." He asserted that "the co-operative movement is strikingly in harmony with Christian ethics."

Co-operation is a "major technique" toward "nonviolent, constructive progress," Dr. Myers asserted. "Large numbers of religious people," he said, "are discovering that they can breathe more freely in an atmosphere of co-operation than in a business, the primary motive of which is private profit."

Economics and Ethics.

Consumers' co-operation can solve the "apparently impossible economic riddle" of keeping prices low and wages high, he pointed out. "It is becoming clear that sound economics coincide with fundamental ethics."

Rabbi Brickner declared that "democracy has nothing to fear" if "one great organization of labor and one great organization of co-operatives" come into being in this country.

"The idea of two branches of the labor movement, tearing each other like two roosters, is a shame and a disgrace," he vehemently asserted. Without mentioning names, Rabbi Brickner added, "the heads of both men will have to go."

E. R. Bowen, general secretary of the Co-operative League of the U. S. A., gave a history of the American co-operative movement, which he termed "democracy applied to economics."

"Price Spread" Is Issue.

"The basic economic question in the United States," he said, "is the spread between consumers' price and producers' pay." Bowen offered as the solution to this problem "a new economic system, based on six types of economic organization social insurance, labor unions and farm marketing co-operatives to raise pay, and publicly owned utilities, consumers' co-operatives and co-operative finance to lower prices.

"Too much hangnig around drug stores and poolrooms," and lack of organized leadership were blamed by members of the Washington Council of the American Youth Congress last night for failure of District youths to enjoy proper and efficient forms of recreation.

In a panel discussion, Francoise Black, head of the District National Youth Administration, told members, "The problem of proper leadership can best be solved by finding the natural leaders among youth groups and obtaining their aid in organizing an adequate recreational program."

In answer to a question from the floor as to whether male and female recreational groups should be kept seperate, Miss Black voiced the opinion that "properly supervised mixed parties and dances would certainly be more desirable than drug store loitering and drinking parties."

Members of the council, representing youths ranging in age from 16 to 25, also discussed plans for a meeting February 25 at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church When Mrs. Roosevelt will address the group on "Youth Wants Peace." Homer P. Rainey, director of the American Youth Commission, will also speak then.

Preparations were also made for the mass "Youth's Pilgrimage for Jobs and Education," scheduled for March 10, 11 and 12, when more than 4,000 members of the Congress will assemble in Washington to appear before congressional committees. Representatives of the pilgrimage will appear before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor to urge passage of the American youth act and other legislation affecting the group.

To that youthful genius of the theater, Mr. Orson Welles, aged 22, the play is the thing.

With an infallible sense of essential dramatic values, an uncanny gift of imparting vitality and unique effect to scenes that long have stagnated in a mire of theatrical conventions, by stage lighting that is sensationally eloquent, and a firm grasp of the fact that Shakespeare wrote for the ages, he has made a new play of "Julius Caesar." New, yet old in the familiar measures of its writing.

Orson Welles' acting version of the Shakespeare tragedy is a thrilling experience in the playhouse. It translates into terms of the present a play that long has been steeped in tradition. It condenses into an unbroken running time of one hour and three-quarters, presented without change of scene or intermission, a play that was written in 5 acts and 18 scenes and frequently has been played at that length. In achieving this miracle of abridgement, Mr. Welles has lost none of the vital elements of action or purpose and none of the lines that every high school pupil can quote.

In Modern Dress.

As "Julius Caesar," in its Mercury Theater version, was presented in the National Theater last night before one of the largest and most enthusiastic audience of the season, it might have been written last week. Costumed, if that is the word, in modern garb—street clothes, military uniforms with Brown belts, tweed overcoats and snap-brim hats—it made no utilization of scenery. Its brilliantly spectacular effects were attained wholly by Mr. Welles' inspired use of spot and flood lights, which served as accentuations of the Shakespearean intent that added to the novelty of the occasion as well as to its forcefulness and vigor.

The bare stage, with only two downstage steps, to lend variety to its speaking levels, and a black velvet backdrop to impart severe austerity to the grim and stark realism of the play, became a peculiarly appropriate "setting" as the action progressed. The performance was given an added impressiveness by exposure of the full proscenium dimensions of the National Theater—an heroic treatment that conveyed an immediate impression of magnitude and expansiveness to the tragic tale of a slaughtered Caesar and the qualms of conscience that brought a retributive end to his murderers.

Is Splendidly Acted.

But the extraordinary quality of the presentation did not have its alpha and omega in the revolutionary nature of its investiture. The play was superlatively well read and acted. In this department it deviated as radically from accepted methods as in the manner of its staging. The play was read with that unexpected and disarming naturalness that lifted it out of the classics of stilted speech and made it a work of contemporary interest and importance.

This was accomplished in the face of certain last-minute handicaps. Owing to the illness of Herbert Ranson, Morgan Farley stepped into the role of Cassius and his original role of Casca was taken by Vincent J. Donohue. Both played their parts as if they never had done any others. Long recognized as a player of fine endowments, Mr. Farley proved again what a splendid actor he is by fulfilling every necessary requirement of one of the most important figures in the play.

In the roles of Brutus, Caesar and Marc Antony, Tom Powers, Lawrence Fletcher and Edmond O'Brien shared equally in the ovation that followed the fall of the final curtain. You might meet their counterparts on any Washington street in any day's walk of a block. They are stalwart young men who moved ancient Rome into the twentieth century and made of Shakespeare's well-known lines the everyday conversation of men immersed in the affairs of their country. If you could not meet them in the National Capital, at least they would be familiar figures in Union Square, New York.

Only Two Feminine Players.

If the ungracious task of singling out the leaders of so excellent a group of mimes is mandatory, I should say that first honors of the evening belong unequivocally to Tom Powers, for his Marcus Brutus, and Edmond O'Brien, for his Marcus Antonius. Antony's oration over the body of Caesar was the finest reading Washington has heard in years, if ever at all.

Only two feminine characters appear in the cast—Helen Craig, as Calpurnia, Caesar's wife, and Muriel Brassler, as Portia, spouse of the brooding Brutus. They were in every sense adequate to the modest demands made upon them by the Welles' script.

The new "Julius Caesar" is a remarkable achievement which leaves scant ground upon which to object to its omission of the "scenes" to which one has become so accustomed through the years.

THE WARNER BROTHERS, through the medium of their subsidiary First National Pictures and Cosmopolitan, have hit on another heretofore untouched topic of more or less epic drama in "Gold Is Where You Find It," previewed yesterday afternoon in the Warners' private projection room in the Earle Theater Building.

BELL.

The Freres Warner seem to have a peculiar faculty for digging out dramatic themes for their celluloid charades. In addition to pioneering sound on the screen with their fabulous Vitaphone, they were the first to perceive the dramatic potentialities of a Georgia chain gang (in "I Am a Fugitive from A Chain Gang"), the vitally human possibilities of an abortive criminal trial (in "They Won't Forget"), the romance of salesmanship in China (in "Oil for the Lamps of China"), the excitement of stringing of high tension wires across the continent (in "Slim") and at numerous other times have evinced a complete willingness to "take a chance" with sources of ostensible drama which others have refused to touch.

They have done the same thing again in "Gold Is where You Find It." This time, the object of their investigative and highly thrilling scrutiny of a virgin field of spectacular effort is the bitter war that was waged between the wheat farmers in the Sacramento Valley of California with the hydraulic miners, whose high-pressure quest of gold in the mountains inundated the pastoral acres of the homesteaders in the fertile lowlands. It is a flamboyant and fruitful subject that they have hit upon here.

The picture is alive with action, heavily laden with romance and, executed in Technicolor throughout its length, pregnant with the natural beauty of one of the Union's most generously and most magnificently endowed States.

Drama is even found in the mechanical complexities of the wheat threshing machines and in the "monitors," water pressures and sluices of the gold-seekers' intricate scheme of washing riches out of the rocks.

If definite classification of this turbulent motion picture is necessary, preliminary to Saturday's more particularized review, I should say that it might safely be tossed into the same pigeonhole with "Wells Fargo," "San Francisco" and other releases of that ilk, as a production that offers a fine welding of fact with fiction and music and color with sound dramatic integrity.

When you view "Gold Is Where You Find It" on the screen at the Earle Theater, beginning Friday, at least you will not be seeing something that has been done a million or two times before. In vague outline, perhaps, yes; in specific content, emphatically no.

And another thing. You will note during the progress of "Gold" that two of the cinema's prominent young players are making rapid strides in the direction of that well-ordered artistry that marks the born actress. They are Olivia de Havilland and Margaret Lindsay. Miss Lindsay, you will recall—or maybe not—is a graduate of Washington's National Park Seminary, where she has been an honored guest more than once since embracing her career before the cameras.

This column once was chided by a reader—it seems there was one—in one of the highest dudgeons it ever has encountered, because "Naughty Marietta" was declared here to be an excellent filmusical. It seems there have been a few others who have subscribed to the view that this Woody S. Van Dyke production, costarring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, is fair entertainment.

For instance, it might be cited that this subject will have played a greater number of engagements at the Warner Brothers' Savoy Theater than any other picture in the history of the house—and it is one of the oldest residential theaters in the Capital.

"Naughty Marietta" will be the feature at the Savoy today and tomorrow. It already has played there on July 2 and 3, 1936, July 23 and 24, August 5, September 5, October 17, 1936; January 13, September 14 and 16, 1937, and now the current dates.

"Naughty Marietta" might be a good picture, after all.

Every year, so the records indicate, some motion-picture producing company finds itself with a hit picture of which nothing extraordinary was expected at the box-office, but which, upon release, proves to be precisely the one for which the public had been waiting. This is manifested by an immediate mass response, uninspired by any pyrotechnic "ballyhoo" contrived to give impetus to public interest. This annual phenomenon, this year, seems to be "Boy of the Streets," in which the adolescent Jackie Cooper returns to the country's screens in what is reputedly a finer performance than any he contributed to the screen during his precocious kid days, when he and Wallace Beery comprised one of the monumental "teams" of the films. "Boy of the Streets" will be previewed tomorrow and presented on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater for its first Washington engagement on Friday. Perhaps Thursday would be a good day to read this column for a more intimate appraisal of its worth, provided you are interested—as everyone seems to be.

It was an excessively recherche birthday party that Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wheeler tossed in their home on Thirty-ninth street last week-end in honor of Harry Peterson. Mr. Wheeler, of course, is Washington manager for Twentieth Century-Fox and Mr. Peterson half of the team of Collins and Peterson, headlining last week at Loew's Capitol.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter Barron, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Muto, Mr. and Mrs. Ferd Friend, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur de Titta, Collins and Peterson, as goes without saying, and Mrs. Peterson, down for the week as a visitor, whose fun was seriously impeded by a sprained ankle; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kurtzman and numerous others prominent in the Capital theatrical world, were among those present.

When Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler give a party the table usually cracks in the middle from the weight of comestibles spread before their guests. This was no exception. But those fresh red peppers! The fire department is still working on all of the unsuspecting souls who had the courage to taste them. The Chicago fire was nothing in comparison—even if Twentieth Century-Fox did make it!

So, while I was watching the Saturday matinee performance of "Save Me the Waltz," with Tallulah Bankhead, at the National, Martha Sleeper, one of the more delightful members of the cast, called on the phone. It was too bad, missing Miss Sleeper, who is one of the most competent of the younger actresses devoting her talents to both stage pieces and the better works of the cinema. I'm hoping for better luck next time.

Hillbilly entertainers who would like to win a $15, $10 or $5 prize and a chance to go on the air in a special broadcast will assemble at the Earle Theater this morning at 9. A quartet, a trio and a number of soloists—fiddlers, guitarists and banjoists—appeared at the Earle yesterday for the first audition. The winning three will be chosen after this morning's final audition.

Applicants must report at the manager's office at the Earle for the audition this morning. The winners will broadcast over station WMAL tonight at 7:45.

The Emory Glee Club, making a one-day appearance in the Capital on Friday, will appear on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater at the 3 o'clock performance, as an extra added attraction. This male ensemble of 32 voices is under the conductorship of Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey and specializes in Negro spirituals and songs of the South. They have toured Europe successfully and are recognized as one of the country's foremost organizations of its kind. They hail from Atlanta, Ga.

As I have remarked on previous occasions, there is no rest for the bleary. Following yesterday's preview of "Gold Is Where You Find It," comes today a similar advance peek at "A Yank at Oxford," the latest starring vehicle for Robert Taylor, made in England. Tomorrow there will be a double-header, divided between the Twentieth Century-Fox and Earle projection rooms—"The Baroness and the Butler," costarring William Powell and Annabella, and "Boy of the Streets," already referred to in these dispatches, with Jackie Cooper as star. More of all this later.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Feb. 14.

ONCE EACH year, the Press Photographers foregather in one of New York's ballrooms and hold celebration. This year it will be the Commodore, on Friday, February 18 . . . There is cause to celebrate, for they are an interpid crew, who view the most exciting events of our times through the cold view-finder of a camera. But that's not the complete picture.

DURING THE Vanderbilt-Whitney court fight over the custody of young Gloria Vanderbilt, the girl was under constant guard against reporters and photographers. It was almost impossible to secure an exclusive picture of Gloria and her mother together. Then came the tip—that Mrs. Vanderbilt was taking her daughter to the circus at Madison Square Garden . . . Pat Candido went to the Garden, donned a clown's outfit and paraded with the other clowns until he reached the spot where the Vanderbilts were sitting. From under his loose coat he got his camera—and then the picture.

DAN GROSSI was assigned to photograph Governor Lehman, at the Governor's Park Avenue apartment. Dan secured his photos, departed—and then remembered that he had forgotten the small pouch in which his speed-gun is kept . . . One week later, Dan met Lehman's police guard, and asked about that pouch. "Forget about it," the State official advised. "The Governor carries your pouch with him now. He says it's just the right size—for his tobacco."

BILL GREENE went to Havre de Grace, the Maryland ractrack, in connection with a story regarding betting at the tracks. "Real action shots is what we want," Greene was instructed. "Get pictures of people making bets, and collecting the dough" . . . He secured those pictures, and was ready to leave—when a Federal man grabbed him . . . "I wasn't betting," Greene protested. "I was just making pictures of other people placing bets" . . . "Well, it's against the law," the officer explained. "It's against the law—to photograph money!"

HANK OLIN, a sports-photographer, covered the Bob Olin-Martin Levandowski fight at the Garden. "Bob is my cousin." Hank boasted to his colleagues, "so you guys are in for a treat—seeing the best fighter in the world" . . . In the second round Levandowski swung a haymaker, floored Olin and kayoed him . . . At the knockdown, Hank's colleagues shouted: "This is our treat now. You can take this picture exclusive."

AL AUMULLER covered the trial of the Cooper brothers, who were convicted on a homicide charge and then were sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment . . . The Coopers obtained a police guard, during the trial, to protect them against news photographers. But Al decided to risk it. He got one picture—and then the defendants broke through their guards to pounce upon him . . . He didn't see them again until they were sentenced. The Coopers spotted him in the courtroom, and called to him. "Don't be sore. It was only my job." Aumuller stated . . . "We didn't call you to tell you we're sore," was the reply. "We called you to ask—how about sending us a copy of that picture?"

DURING THE Flo Leeds-James Stillman trial, Photographer S. O. Wally learned that Flo was planning to sail on the Homeric, and that she would use the name "Kevah Lincoln." Wally rushed to the boat and made a systematic search of all the staterooms . . . He tapped on one door and asked to see Flo Leeds. A voice answered, sweetly: "Yes"—and then a 200-lb. stranger opened the door, swung a right, and flattened Wally . . . The cameraman crawled to the adjoining cabin, heard the "All Ashore!" gong, and stared through the portholes—watched, until he saw the hefty stranger walk down the gang-plank. Wally then returned to the Leeds' stateroom. "Will you pose for just one picture?" he asked . . . "Of course," Flo agreed. "Why didn't you say—that this was what you wanted?"

SAMMY SCHULMAN, covering the royal wedding of Crown Prince Humberto of Italy and Marie Jose of Belgium, was the only American permitted to witness the ceremony in Rome. He was instructed to wear full evening dress, including a silk hat . . . When the bride and groom arrived at the palace, Sammy posed the royal couple and photographed them. The plates were delivered to an official army motorcyclist, who was to take them to the airport . . . Schulman somehow was pushed in front of the motorcycle and was thrown to the pavement. His silk hat rolled in the street, straight under the wheels of an arriving carriage . . . The ceremony was about to begin, and so Sammy called a cabby, purchased his top-piece, and then, wearing this driver's slightly-green-with-age silk hat, entered the regal palace of Rome.

When the ill-fated submarine S-51 was brought back to the Brooklyn Navy Yard to be dry-docked, Rear Admiral Plunkett, then commandant of the yard, issued orders that no cameramen were to be permitted close enough to photograph the gaping hole in the side of the submarine. Photographer Cince Lopez immediately rushed back to his office and got Big Bertha, the long-range camera used for football and baseball games . . . He returned to the yard, hid in one of the buildings, and then—when the water had been emptied from the drydock, affording a clear view of the gaping hole in the S-51—Lopez poked the camera's len out the window, and fired away.

In Hollywood With Hedda Hopper

By Hedda Hopper.

Hollywood, Feb. 14.

My first glimpse of Gary Cooper showed him sitting lazily on the back of a horse in "The Winning of Barbara Worth" . . . that's all he did . . . but even so, you remembered him. The next glimpse was in person. We were making the picture "Children of Divorce," starring Clara Bow, with Frank Lloyd directing. The scene was my New York apartment with the young and older generation sitting around sipping highballs, champagne, cocktails . . . smoking, playing cards . . . altogether being just as rowdy as those scenes usually are in motion pictures.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Gary entered the scene in his first cutaway, striped trousers as a man about town. He was supposed to enter and walk nonchalantly from one girl to another. Here sipping a cocktail . . . there taking a puff of a girl's cigarette, chucking another one under the chin, placing a playful kiss on the neck of still another.

* * * *

What an exhibition! Why, Gary couldn't realistically play that scene today . . . so you can imagine what he did ten years ago. If he had been in a strait-jacket he couldn't have been stiffer . . . so the scene was taken over. Finally, the hetic day ended and it was intimated that Mr. Cooper was to be pulled out of the picture. But the next morning the executives saw the rushes of the previous day's work and their attitude toward Cooper changed from night to day. The screen showed them a shy, charming boy combined with the most rugged man's man they had viewed in a decade. Star material, and how!

So the master minds got together, and I very much fear Mr. Cooper was framed. They evolved the scheme of starting a romance between the two leading people. Now, you might think that was an easy task, but at that time Clara Bow was one of the biggest box-office successes, and a very important star . . . Gary Cooper meant no more than John Smith or Isaac Tadpole. And it was some task to intrigue Clara's interest. I could tell you who cooked up that little romance, but I think there are some tales that should be left untold. But during that picture love was born . . . and when it was finished . . . well, Paramount had another star on its hands.

Gary went from that into "Wings," then followed "Lilac Time," with Colleen Moore, and the love pact with Clara broke up. I believe the next romance was with Evelyn Brent . . . then came Lupe Velez. Not until he met this Mexican wildcat did Gary really let down the bars completely and become a fun-loving boy.

Their escapades made history . . . they gave each other simple little presents like eagles, and wild cats, and I have a picture of Gary climbing the peaks at Catalina Island trying to find a wild goat for Lupe and saying, "I think she would like it . . . it might remind her of herself." During this period, Lupe bought herself a swimming pool . . . and if you could have seen those two idiots dressed up in overalls, with paint brushes in their hands doing the work themselves! Why you could hear their laughter blocks away.

All the time Gary was working day and night at the studio, going from one picture to another . . . with all the producers in town clamoring for his services . . . and, of course, the parties at night were just as feverish as the work at day. I remember one at Eddie Goulding's house with Tallulah Bankhead as guest of honor. She planned to have Gary locked in a room, but he was too smart to walk into that little trap.

Goes Hunting in Africa.

All these hectic activities brought on the inevitable nervous breakdown, and he was given a six months' holiday. The longest boat trip was to Italy, so he took it. There he met a wealthy woman who still figures in most of the Hollywood chatter columns. She got up a hunting party and they went to Africa. Gary came back to Hollywood at the end of six months looking like a new man and eager for more work.

It was then he met his present charming wife, who came to Hollywood to seek a film career for herself. With her she brought her old nurse and a dog. She was convinced that she was the only woman in the world for Gary Cooper. Having seen him in all his pictures, she had a schoolgirl adoration for him. Well, girls, she concentrated, and she's now Mrs. Cooper.

Likes a Sweater and a Pipe.

They've given up trying to make a man about town of Gary, thank goodness. He loves a simple life . . . an old sweater and his pipe. You'll see him on the set and you'll think, "What a relaxed young man!" His eyes are closed, or so you think . . . but he never misses a trick or a pretty girl passing by . . . there isn't one ounce of waste energy emanating from that young fellow.

Year Will Set All-Time High In Extra Work

This will be an all-time record year for film extras!

More of them will be employed—and at more pay per work hour—than ever before in the history of the motion-picture industry!

That's the prediction of studio experts, based upon last year's figures together with production schedules for 1938.

Record year for extras so far was 1937, when extras earned $2,986,372, an increase of $565,919 over 1936. Total placements were 294,307, as compared to 286,436 the previous year.

In 1938, the experts compute, studios will employ more than 300,000 extras and pay them a total of $3,500,000 or higher!

Part of the 1937 boom was due to the producers' contract with the Screen Actors' Guild, which became effective June 1, and raised the minimum extra check from $3.20 to $5.50, among other benefits.

Also responsible for the increase was the fact that there were more "big" pictures in production. Major films like Cecil B. De Mille's "The Buccaneer," Frank Lloyd's "Wells Fargo," "The Big Broadcast of 1938," "San Francisco" and "In Old Chicago" budgeted large sums for supernumerary players.

Among the pictures of the same magnitude in 1938 will be Paramount's "Spawn of the North," saga of the Alaskan salmon industry; "Hudson's Bay Company," "Marching Herds," "The Light That Failed," "Ruler of the Seas," "The Big Broadcast of 1939;" M-G-M's "Marie Antoinette," "Sea of Grass," "The Student Prince" and "Three Comrades;" Twentieth Century-Fox's "Kidnaped," "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "Gone With the Wind."

Hazen Gets $12,000 Of Birthday Funds

Nearly $12,000 on proceeds from four affairs sponsored by the President's Birthday Ball Committee were presented yesterday to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the local committee.

Col. J. M. Wainwright, commanding officer at Fort Myer, turned over the largest single amount, $4,277, collected at horse shows at Fort Myer. Dr. George Havenner presented Commissioner Hazen with a check for $1,004 taken in at a party by G. P. O. employes.

Clark Griffith
50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

Chapter Thirty-One:

CLARK GRIFFITH WAS PRESSING HIS LUCK.—That was the unanimous opinion of baseball critics, after the Old Fox announced that 26-year-old Joe Cronin was his choice as the manager of the Washington club of 1933. Sure, Griffith had come up with a winner, when he promoted Bucky Harris from the ranks nine years before. But miracles do not repeat themselves.

There were veiled charges that Griffith was in his dotage . . . that his success with a "boy manager" in 1924 had gone to his head. Griffith was saddling a superb shortstop with managerial responsibilities that could hardly fail to handicap his play on the field.

The 64-year-old owner of the Nats, pleased, at least, with having tossed another bombshell into the baseball scene, was content to await results of his experiment. He liked Cronin for his hustle on the field, his fire in competition and firmly believed that his young shortstop was a thorough student of baseball, with more than a spark of leadership.

He called Cronin into conference, a week before the 1932-33 winter trading sessions opened in New York. He asked Cronin what ideas he had for improving the Washington club.

Cronin produced a slip of paper containing several names. "If we had these players on our club, I think we could win the pennant, Mr. Griffith," said the newly appointed manager.

Griffith perused the list of six names . . . and gasped.

"Why, Joe, this looks impossible. Those players belong to three other clubs in the league. We don't even know if they're on the market," said Griffith.

The audacity of his young manager had taken Griffith completely by surprise. "You just can't appropriate players off other teams like this, Joe," he said. "I'll grant you we might win a pennant with 'em, but how are we going to get them?"

Cronin Suggests Purchase of Six Players to Win in 1933.

"WELL, MR. GRIFFITH," SAID CRONIN, naively, "they always told me you were a pretty good baseball trader. I thought if anybody could swing a deal for 'em, you could."

If Cronin was attempting to appeal to the Old Fox's vanity, he succeeded.

"By sin," said Griffith, "you may be right. But why are you picking these fellows? You've listed Earl Whitehill, of the Tigers; Luke Sewell and Jack Russell, from the Indians; Goose Goslin, Fred Schulte and Walter Stewart, from the Browns. Why do you figure those are the fellows we need?"

"I've been thinking it over," said Cronin, "and it appears to me that the team we've got to beat for the pennant is the Yankees. That's why I want Earl Whitehill and Walter Stewart, particularly. They always have been tough for the Yankees. So has Jack Russell, for that matter.

EVEN THE "OLD FOX" waved his inevitable gray felt when Manager Joe Cronin's 1933 team copped the American League pennant.

They've all been tough against us, too. If we can get 'em on our club, we're not going to lose so many games next season, and we'll have some pitchers who can whip the Yankees for us. Sewell will give us the catcher we need, Goslin is the left-handed hitter we need and Schulte is the right-handed outfielder. That's the way I figure it."

With more hope than confidence, Griffith set out for the trading session in New York with Cronin in tow. That night he swung a deal—trading First Baseman Harley Boss to Cleveland for Pitcher Russell. Later in the evening he bought Catcher Sewell from the Indians for $20,000 in cash.

"Old Fox" Proves Himself Still a Good Trader.

"WELL, THERE'S A START, JOE," he told his young manager.

The next day, after haunting the lobbies and button-holing representatives of the Detroit club, Griffith announced another deal. Earl Whitehill had been acquired from the Tigers in exchange for Fred Marberry and Pitcher Carl Fischer, whose release Griffith had bought from the Browns.

"We've got a nerve trying to put over everything we came here for," Griffith remarked to Cronin, "but so far we're doing all right. I'm going after the Browns tonight."

He did. He engineered a trade that brought to Washington the other three players on Cronin's list—Stewart, Goslin and Schulte. In exchange, Griffith gave up to the Browns Outfielders Carl Reynolds and Sammy West and Pitcher Lloyd Brown.

Griffith had made good in the trading market. "It's up to you, now, Joe, to make good out there next summer," he told his "boy-manager."

Cronin did. His managerial responsibilities, far from affecting his own play, seemed to inspire it. He was the leading fielder among the regular shortstops and batted a respectable .309, hitting more two-baggers than any other player in the league. He had the Nats clicking from the outset. His every trade was justified. Whitehill, Stewart and Monte Weaver beat the Yankees consistently. Alvin Crowder won more games than any hurler in the league except Lefty Grove—24—which was Grove's figure, also.

For most of the season, it was a two-team race between the Yankees and Washington. Philadelphia, the perennial challenger, cut no figure since Connie Mack had disposed of his stars . . . Simmons, Dykes, Grove, Walberg, Haas and Cochrane. Washington overtook the Yankees in August and breezed into the pennant to roll up a margin of seven games at the finish.

For Griffith, the 1933 pennant triumph was most timely. Baseball, that season, had begun to feel the full impact of the depression. Salaries were still up and the team that did not prove a gate attraction stood to take severe losses. Washington's margin of profit, even though it were a pennant-winning year, was small; less, in fact, than in many seasons when the team had finished down in the race. But Cronin's triumph was fortunate. It averted for Griffith what might have been the most financially disastrous season in 20 years.

Giants Take 1933 Series With Little Difficulty.

OTHER CLUBS, WITH THEIR MULTIMILLIONAIRE backing, easily survived the lean season of 1933; but anything less than a pennant triumph would have been a serious blow to the Washington club treasury. Thus was Griffith doubly grateful to his young manager.

But he was not averse to taking a portion of credit for himself. For he liked to think that he was the "Old Fox" who, without the acquisition of a single superstar—he did not regard any of his new 1933 material an outstanding star—had patched together a team that could win the championship for Cronin.

The World Series of that year—Washington vs. the Giants—was a blow to Griffith's hopes and shattered part of the thrill of triumph for Manager Cronin. Washington entered the series a 7-to-5 favorite.

Carl Hubbell won the opener for the Giants in New York, 4-3, holding the Nats to five hits and profiting from a home run and three other safeties by Mel Ott. The Giants pounded Walter Stewart out of the box in the third inning. It was a sad crew of Nats that re-

Bill Temes, Rusty Baker, Sam Bacala and Toots Bernstein Win.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Saverio Turiello, clever little Italian welterweight, made his fistic debut in Washington last night and left a lasting impression on those who saw him, particularly on the battle-scarred features of Johnny Lucas, whom he bested in 10 torrid rounds of fist-slinging.

A turnout of 1,200 customers, including Gary Cooper of movie fame, saw Turiello, whose English isn't very good but whose ring style is almost impeccable, win seven rounds, lose one, and break even in the remaining two. He won everything but the local boxing commission's charter.

Cooper called on gendarmes to protect him from swarms of fans seeking autographs, and a couple of coppers would have been of great assistance to Lucas. The cagey Camden campaigner resorted to every artifice at his command to avoid being knocked out, and succeeded, but took an artistic shellacking for his trouble. It may have been St. Valentine's Day, but they were no love taps Saverio tossed at his opponent.

Lucas Wins First.

Lucas' best round, his only round as a matter of record, was the first, when he rushed from his corner, stung the Italian with two hard lefts to the temple and chased him menacingly around the ring. Turiello couldn't get started, and Lucas had things pretty much his own way. But the situation changed changed drastically and dramatically in the second when Saverio dug three painful left hooks in Lucas' ribs and scored with a light right to the head that told the bald veteran to be cautious.

[illegible] a rank novice, ducking so low he nearly scraped his chin on the canvas, while Lucas swung wildly and blindly about 2 feet above, trying to connect.

Again in the tenth round Lucas backed Turiello into a corner and you could almost read the pleasure in his mind at having the Italian in such an embarrassing position. He waded in after him, lashing out sharply with both fists, but Turiello ducked harmlessly under the blows and left him shadow-boxing in the corner.

There were no knockdowns, although Lucas' knees wobbled precariously in the fourth, eighth and ninth rounds, but Johnny was in there to stay—and did. Turiello opened a small cut on Lucas' forehead with an overhand smash in the fourth, and staggered him with a resounding left hook to the body, but Lucas weathered the storm in decent style.

Lucas Paws Weakly.

Lucas' best round, after the curtain-raiser, was the seventh when he caught Turiello with a potent right to the jaw. The sturdy foreigner grinned at him and walked in punching. Lucas shot another hard right to the head and whipped a left hook to the body, but Turiello shook them off and came right back with both hands pumping leather to the body.

In the sixth Lucas chased Turiello back into his corner immediately after answering the bell, and caught him with a brace of rights, but Turiello out-generaled him and succeeded in off-setting any damage with a flurry of late punches to the body.

Turiello finished as fresh as the morning's milk, ready for more. Lucas was puffing a little, and a wee bit weary of the whole thing.

Bill Temes won a unanimous decision over Scotty Smith in the 4-round inaugural. Rusty Baker, of Baltimore, put Stan Skibo to sleep after 2:40 of the first round in their scheduled four-rounder. Sam Bacala won the nod over Tommy Hoover, and in the 6-round semifinal "Toots" Bernstein won a unanimous decision over Bob Wilson. They were uniformly dismal.

Bob Quinn Is 68; Bees' President in Baseball 50 Years

Boston, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—One of the oldest men in baseball had a birthday today, but unless you knew that Bob Quinn was born in Columbus, Ohio, in 1870, you'd never guess that the president of the Boston Bees was 68 years old.

Fifty years of active association with baseball players in what he calls "the game that has done the most for the American people" has kept Quinn from growing old. He faces the approaching season with the enthusiasm of a far younger man.

Quinn is the oldest active baseball man in the National League and ranks with Connie Mack, the scorecard-waving manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Clark Griffith, the "Old Fox" of the Washington Senators, as the three oldest men in the game.

Defeats Germany, 1-0, in Title Tourney.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 14.—The United States amateur hockey team won its third straight game of the world championship tournament tonight, defeating Germany, 1 to 0, in a hard-fought battle.

The Americans were faster than the Germans, and individually outskated their opponents throughout the game, but only in the first period when the lone goal came was the famed United States team work in evidence.

Artie Bogue, of Detroit, and Laurier I. Charest, of Lewiston, Me., combined for the victorious tally. Bogue got the puck behind his own goal and worked it up the ice by passing and repassing until Charest moved into a scoring position at the left corner of the rink. Charest took Bogue's relay and whipped it past the German goalie.

The German goalie made several brilliant saves in the second period to keep his team in the running.

Last Rites Are Held For Jimmy Sullivan

Last rites for James A. Sullivan, jr., 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sullivan, 4116 Fourth street northwest, were held at St. Gabriel's Church yesterday.

Young Sullivan died, at San Diego, Calif., last Monday, of injuries received in a tumble from a mount he was riding at Agua Caliente, on Sunday, January 30.

Interment was at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Cards Beat A.U., 32-22, As Fist Flies

Ambrose Annexes Scoring Lead as Eagles Are Beaten.

By Bob Garrison.

Propelled by fast swinging action of their limbs, the Cardinals of Catholic University outflew the Eagles of American University to revenge a previous basketball defeat last night in the American U. gym, in a style more closely resembling tactics learned on the gridiron.

The score was 32-22.

A capacity crowd watched as the Catholic U. football team in basketball uniforms combined an accurate scoring attack with a stone wall defense to register their third victory of the season in 13 starts. It was their second game with the Eagles this season.

The rought affair, that saw players piled in heaps of three and four at every turn, came to a head in the closing minutes of play when Rocco Pirro, C. U. center, took a round-house swing at Dad Rogers, the opposing tap-off man. The swing landed solidly in the nape of the lad's neck.

An incipient riot was quickly calmed, however, when calmer members of both teams stepped between the two players. Pirro had been shoved into the backstop by Rogers as he attempted to shoot from under the basket.

While his teammates were demonstrating that a good defense, rough and clumsy though it may be, is also a pretty good offense, Wayne "Whitey" Ambrose was busy dropping in six field goals and two foul shots to account for 14 points. The accumulation gave him a season total of 158 and first place in the District scoring race. He supplants Charlie Norton, ineligible Maryland University center.

Relying on the same freshman combination that had played so effectively against Virginia Medical College earlier in the week, Coach Staff Cassell saw his starting line-up that included four first year players, slowly beaten down by the heavier, slow-moving Cardinal five which consisted of the same starting combination that had bowed to the Eagles in the first game.

The Eagles started well and assumed an early lead of 4-1. Their altitudinous position was short lived, however, as the Red Birds soon climbed as a salvo of eight straight baskets was combined with a bad case of missies by the Eagles. After American had seen its lead

Welch Hopes 'Fight' Won't Affect Games

Fearful that the excited enthusiasm that led Rocco Pirro, Catholic University center, to take a "punch" at Dud Rogers, American U tap-off man, in last night's game might jeopardize the relations between the two schools, Gus Welsh, athletic director of American, expressed "regret" over the incident.

"I was sorry to see it happen," he told Forrest "Fod" Cotton, Catholic University coach, after the game.

Commenting further on the near riot after Dud Rogers had pushed the hefty Card into the auditorium stage, as he attempted a shot, Welsh said:

"I don't know how the incident will effect the administration of this school. I hope that nothing will result that would affect our athletic relations."

Marshall and Battles Confer; Grid Star Still Wants to Coach

Redskins' Ground-Gaining Ace Offered Nice Salary Increase to Remain With Team.

Cliff Battles, with an unsigned Columbia University coaching contract in his coat pocket, sat and talked football with Owner George Marshall, of the Washington Professional Redskins yesterday—and George did most of the talking.

Mr. Marshall insists on impressing the young gentleman that playing pigskin hide-and-seek in the National Professional Football League, of which the Redskins are currently the monarchs, is the millenium, Valhalla, Shangri-La, or anything nice you can think of.

Mr. Battles, whose chief claim to fame rests on his title as the greatest ground gainer in the pro league last season, is sold on the Columbia proposition, but is willing to listen, for a while yet, to various and sundry arguments—provided they are punctuated with dollar signs.

Whether or not Mr. Marshall's punctuation was good enough during yesterday's conference, neither Battles nor the Redskins' president would say. But Mr. Marshall and the National Pro League, having no great reputation as punctuators of that type, it is unlikely that the session will change Battles' mind about the Columbia proposition.

Mr. Marshall continues optimistic, however. "Battles seems to feel that his future lies in college coaching, but we have reached no agreement," he said after the conference.

"Battles is a great ball player and a fine boy," Marshall said. "I offered him a healthy raise over what he received last year and I still have hopes of having him with us. However, his mind seems to be made up on the college coaching proposition."

"It just goes to show, though, what a high type of football is played in the National Professional League when colleges of Columbia's high athletic standing reach out and take its coaching staffs from our ranks."

Battles told The Post several days ago that he had agreed to Columbia's terms in a long-distance phone conversation with Lou Little, coach of the Lions, and that the contract was on its way. The Redskin star is to receive $1,000 more for his work at Columbia than for playing in the Redskins' backfield.

Battles is employed by Wash B. Williams, local bottling company executive, in the off-season and would probably lose that connection should he leave the Redskins. However, there have been rumors that Battles had been offered several other off-season posts which, summed up, would net him a higher salary than he is making with his Washington connections.

In the meantime, Marshall Jack Espey, his general manager, are both making a last-ditch attempt to keep Battles in the lineup. Loss of the star would lessen even the touted Sammy Baugh's effectiveness and probably have it effect on the gate.

Tom-Toms Beat Loud and Long for Mann and Adamick

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Feb. 14.—Fistic tom-tom beating for Nathan Mann as "outstanding challenger for heavyweight crown held by Joe Louis" and for Detroit's Jimmy Adamick, "probably the hardest puncher in the game today," tops anything perpetrated along New York's Cauliflower Alley for many moons . . . quotation marks, of course, are from Mike Jacobs' ballyhoo department . . .

Mann, rugged but slow and no baffling target, figures to give Champion Louis a much needed tuneup for his forthcoming return match with Max Schmeling . . . But that's about all, for the benefit of cash customers who will pay $16.50 top and, perhaps, fill Madison Square Garden for first indoor match for world heavyweight title since Jack Dempsey flattened old Bill Brennan in the old garden in 1920 . . .

Glenn Cunningham, working up to the objective of cracking his world indoor mile record (4:08.4) by relatively easy stages, may really let himself go this Saturday night in the Baxter Mile, headliner of the New York A. C. games . . . Galloping Glenn, according to our own research department, has been clocked six times under 4:10 out of a total of 15 such performances in foot-racing history since 1931 . . . His Kansas rival, Archie San Romani, has turned the trick three times and may rejoin the argument this week, after an enforced layoff, due to being spiked in the Millrose meet . . .

They're calling him "Dignity" Dean now in St. Louis, where Globe Democrat's Maurice Chevlin says: "Diz has stepped right up like a businessman and put the burden of proof on the Cardinal management," by volunteering to take $5,000 pay cut . . . "If they sign him at $20,000," writes Shev, "he'll be far from the highest paid player . . . If they try any sharpshooting with him he can keep fans on his side with his present dignity." . . . Maybe we'd better borrow the words from Walt Disney's classic and make it "Dig, Dig, Dig" for "Diz, Diz, Diz."

. . . .

Vanderbilt men, feting Head Coach Ray Morrison and All-America Capt. Carl Hinkle at Nashville tonight, were relieved when Michigan signed Fritz Crisler, reports Bob Phillips in Birmingham Age-Herald . . . Maybe they've started worrying again since it developed Ray's name is on Princeton's recommended list. Curb Exchange A. A. going in heavily for sports lineups, is sponsoring ice skating and rifle teams, besides track and field stars . . . Columbia's Ben Johnson, new sprint king, will be added to the roster which already includes Cunningham, San Romani and Jim Herbert, N. Y. U. sophomore.

No Sir Surprises by Beating Stake Eligibles at Hialeah

This Morning

A Prospective Jockey's Entrance Quiz.

James Young,
1207 C street northeast,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Jim:

So you want to be a jockey?

You say you are 16, weigh 100 pounds, rode a horse once in a Fort Myer Horse Show and formerly were a Senate page. Your youth, weight and riding experience are assets, but you will find it more difficult to wait on horses than Senators. By your persistence in cornering me, I regard you as a determined young man, capable of making good in your life battle, but I believe a better future lies for you in the field of doctor, lawyer or merchant chief. However, if you insist on jockey as an objective, there's no time like the present to acquaint yourself with the job.

HAIGHT.

Now, Jim, you're not going to walk up to a trainer today and be boosted into the saddle of a Kentucky Derby entry tomorrow, even if you tell the trainer you're a good boy from a nice family. If you impress a trainer as a jockey prospect, he might "take you on," as the riders say, providing your parents consent. Then you become fourth assistant to the stableman.

Among your duties will be: sponge horses, rub horses, lead horses around the exercise ring for hours, change bedding in stalls, carry water, sweep under sheds, wash bandages, blankets and rags, run errands and throw many a pitchfork load on the pile.

You may or may not have time to yourself, according to your stable, but generally your hours will be from 4 a. m. until dark and you probably will assist the night watchman by sleeping with one ear cocked for unusual noises around the stable. Occasionally, you may straddle a horse while he is being led around the exercise ring or ride the lead pony. But rain, shine, snow or blow you must be on the job.

After six months or a year, provided you perform your duties and still say, "Yes, Sir" and "No, Sir," you may get to work out some horses. You may be fortunate enough to get good actors at first but you must not show timidness if assigned a bucking [illegible]. You can't afford to be [illegible] morning in [illegible] stable duties.

About six months later, the trainer, provided you haven't eaten yourself out of the chance, may give you a mount on the non-trying half of an entry in a regular race; that is, if he believes you can protect yourself. You might believe that you will be eligible for the $15 losing and $25 winning fee, but you won't. You are under contract at your stable and get only a small monthly salary, which won't last long in a stable crap game.

If you are one of those rare apprentices, you probably will get some outside mounts after you ride your first winner; that is, if your boss allows you, provided, of course, you ever ride a winner. If you fail to make the grade at this stage, it's generally too late. You have the track in your blood. There are hundreds of would-be jockeys for every jockey around the tracks and many, at middle age, still work out horses for a meager living.

However, I'm going to presume that you become a good apprentice. You ride winners for your stable and other owners. Money begins to roll in and with it temptation. Jockeys may "proposition" you about riding, sharpsters may see if you will "listen"—then there will be wine, women and song. Jockeys can't straddle temptation. They go one way or the other. Into saddle oblivion on one side and a fair living on the other.

The paddock fences each day are lined with boys and men, once saddle greats, who couldn't stand prosperity. Of course, you may get along on the wrong side for a time, but sooner or later comes the reckoning.

Even at the "good apprentice" stage, you will not have made good. You still get the five-pound allowance and for this reason you are in demand. After your apprenticeship, and you "lose the bug," as it is called, you must make good again. If you do make the grade, your chances of being a Earl Sande, Sonny Workman, Eddie Arcaro or Wayne Wright are slight. You either will have the top jockey spark or you won't.

All the while, from the day you first mount a horse, those fences and those pounding hoofs will be right there waiting for the careless or the unlucky. Jockeys don't always survive those falls.

If you make good, it will be track to track to track. Little chance for family life. And suppose you become a star and get a $10,000 yearly contract, at sunrise you must be out at the track, working out horses.

And there's weight to consider. They don't bury jockeys up to their necks in manure any more to reduce them, but that weight comes off only after hard effort. Roadwork and dieting probably will be your daily dose.

It's 100-to-1 you won't ride a winner, 1,000-to-1 you won't be a run-of-the-mine jockey and it's 10,000-to-1 you won't be a top-flight rider.

If you still want to be a jockey, Jim, meet me at Fifteenth and H streets northeast Thursday morning at 9 a. m. and I'll introduce you to Trainer Elmer Trueman at Benning. Sincerely,

WALTER HAIGHT.

Orientalist Runs Second As 8 Start

Francesco Third With Favored Entry Out of the Money.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 14.—Eight members of the handicap division, including four nominees for the McLennan Memorial and Widener Cup events, clashed in the 1-mile Palatka Purse here today, with Mary Hirsch's No Sir, long a disappointment, finally coming through with a top form performance to score his first success in eight winter starts. Well handled by Carroll Bierman, the Sortie gelding clicked by two lengths to return $8.90 for $2.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's Orientalist was second by a half length, with Francesco, privately sold by the J. H. Whitney Stable to the Darby Dan Farm of John W. Galbreath this morning, a belated third.

No Sir, under 107 pounds, finished the 8 furlongs in 1:38 4-5.

It was a sad day for favorite players. The defeat of the Maemere Farm entry of Mgeriel and Maedic in the feature left the talent winnerless in six straight races. Maeriel was last away in a poor start.

Maedic did the running for the stable. Led by daylight to the turn out of the back stretch, where Bierman shot No Sir into command. Maedic stopped badly and his partner could not make up an appreciable amount of ground.

No Sir drove into the clear through the stretch but was kept under pressure to the finish. Orientalist, never far behind, held on gamely to stave off the belated rally of Francesco.

Those in the race eligible for the McLennan Meorial, a mile and a furlong, $7,500 added fixture scheduled for Saturday, and the Widener Cup, $50,000 added, 1¼-mile classic to be decided March 1, are No Sir, Maeriel, Maedic and Court Scandal. The latter was badly outrun all the way.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HELLO STRANGER, $12.70, $7.30, $6.20; JACK HORNER, $7.00, $3.40; GENERAL HOWES, $8.00.

HELLO STRANGER, quickest to begin, drew clear in the run out of the chute, held away the remainder of the trip to win in hand. JACK HORNER, away well and a forward contender, responded gamely to pressure and outlasted GENERAL HOWES. The latter broke cleanly, performed greenly and hung when the final test came.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:33½. Winner, H. R. Bain's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAKING HAY, $16.30, $5.70, $4.50; LOURDES, $3.60, $2.90; BROGAN, $5.20.

MAKING HAY, a forward factor in the run down the backstretch, raced BROGAN into defeat rounding the turn and drew clear entering the stretch and held on tenaciously when the final test came. LOURDES broke well, but was permitted to drop far out of it in the early running. She improved her position rapidly between the leaders when straightened into the stretch and would have won in a few more strides. BROGAN, quickest to get going, showed the most speed, but faltered in the stretch run.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; Class C. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:04½. Winner, Stanmount Stable's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JON JON, $17.50, $7.60, $6.10; AT PLAY, $6.20, $4.20; MAEAYRES, $6.80.

JON JON, vigorously urged, gradually improved his position while slipping through on the inside and wore AT PLAY down in the closing strides. AT PLAY moved up rapidly along the inner rail rounding the turn, took command entering the stretch while coming wide. He made a game effort under pressure, but could not stave off the winner. MAEAYRES went forwardly under light restraint and moved up [illegible]nacingly between the leaders entering the stretch, but hung slightly in the stretch

[illegible]TH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-[illegible] upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went [illegible] at 3:32. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD BUCKLE, $15.60, $7.90, $4.70; CROWNING GLORY, $6.00, $4.10; SMUGGLED IN (entry), $3.50.

GOLD BUCKLE, away well, went forwardly on the outside in the early stages. He responded gamely to strong urging through the stretch and won going away. CROWNING GLORY, hard ridden, shook off SMUGGLED IN in the run down the backstretch. He saved ground the remainder of the trip, but was unable to keep stride with the winner. SMUGGLED IN found his stride quickly and displayed good speed, but faltered in the final furlong.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Melbourne. For 3-year-olds. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:02. Winner, Mrs. K. Ramsey's ch. g. (3), by Kai Feng—Bred at Home. Trained by K. Ramsey. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:39 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FENG, $8.50, $3.40, $3.00; BLIND EAGLE, $3.00, $2.40; PERNIE, $3.30.

FENG outbroke the field, but was taken back entering the backstretch and was rated in front while saving ground in the early running, opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch, but was ridden out vigorously to maintain his advantage. BLIND EAGLE maintained a fair position under intermittent punishment throughout and closed gamely through the stretch, but could not overhaul the winner. PERNIE, in close attendance of the pace all the way, faltered through the stretch and just lasted long enough to stave off ALPS' rush.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Palatka. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:32. Winner, Mary Hirsch's b. or br. g. (4), by Sortie—Fib. Trained by Mary Hirsch. Value to winner, $650; second, $300; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:38 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NO SIR, $8.90, $5.80, $4.90; ORIENTALIST, $5.70, $4.30; FRANCESCO, $4.90.

NO SIR, away well, went forwardly on the outside under slight restraint until straightened into the stretch. He responded with determination when placed under pressure and disposed of MAEDIC and held ORIENTALIST safe at the end. The latter, keen contender all the way, made a bold effort through the stretch, but could not reach the winner. FRANCISCO, slow to get going, swung around the leader entering the stretch and closed strongly and outlasted PATTY CAKE.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:06. Winner, Woodvale Farm's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACQUELINE M., $23.80, $11.50, $5.30; MINTSON, $17.90, $6.70; MEMOIRS, $2.70.

JACQUELINE M. followed the leaders under slight restraint until well straightened into the stretch. She moved up with determination when called upon and wore the leaders down while bearing in and won going away. WEEKLY STIPEND, pinched back entering the backstretch, gradually worked her way forward on the outside, closed gamely when the final issue came and troubled MEMOIRS, for which she was disqualified. MINTSON broke alertly and moved to the front with a rush while crossing the field in the run out of the chute, and displayed the most speed, but faltered in the stretch run. MEMOIRS, prominent on the outside the entire trip, responded to pressure gamely through the stretch, but was pinched back; however, she appeared well beaten at the time.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:39. Off at 5:39½. Winner, Woolford Farm's ch. g. (7), by Dazzler—Kitzi. Trained by B. A. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48, 1:13 3-5, 1:40, 2:07, 2:34 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARL B., $3.50, $3.20, $2.60; BLACK MISCHIEF, $3.60, $2.30; MINE BOY, $3.20.

CARL B., under stout restraint in the first mile, shook off BLACK MISCHIEF rounding the lower turn, saved ground the remainder of the trip and maintained his lead with determination. BLACK MISCHIEF displayed good speed while saving ground early. He was taken back rounding the last turn and came around the leader entering the stretch, but bore out steadily the last three-sixteenths mile. MINE BOY, sluggish in the early stages, saved much ground entering the stretch and finished with a belated rush.

Jimmy Thomson Paces Pro Money Winners

$2,505 Won In 6 Events; Revolta Next

Henry Picard, Jimmy Hines, Harry Cooper Trail in Order.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Siege-gun Jimmy Thomson was able to count $2,505 in folding money yesterday, fruits of California's six open golf tournaments, as the pro links brigade left the Golden State's sodden shores for New Orleans and the East Coast events.

By virtue of his victory and top money of $2,100 in the Los Angeles open, Thomson led the 1938 money winners by exactly $6.67, with square-jawed Johnny Revolta the close second.

The half-dozen tournaments, including the Los Angeles open, first event of the new year; the Bing Crosby tournament, Pasadena, Oakland, Sacramento and San Francisco match play open, produced as many winners in Thomson, Sammy Snead, Henry Picard, Harry Cooper, Johnny Revolta and Jimmy Demaret, in order.

Only five of the 62 professionals who shared in the $26,500 in prize money were able to finish in the money in each tournament, and they proved to be four of the five leaders. Thomson, Hines, Picard and Revolta.

Picard Next.

Trailing Revolta by a matter of some $380 was the Chocolate Town swinger, Henry Picard, who will not make the trip East because of illness. "Pic" won $2,128.50 to lead Jimmy Hines, with $1,745, and Harry Cooper, $1,478.34.

Slammin Sammy Snead, who skyrocketed to fame on this same trip in 1937, was in sixth place with $1,329.50. Snead was out of the money only in the Pasadena Open, where he picked up on the eleventh hole. Jimmy Demaret, the Texas "comet," used his $1,000 match play Open purse to pull up behind Snead with $1,250.

Lawson Little, with a third-place tie in the rich Los Angeles event as his principal achievement, Horton Smith and Vic Ghezzi completed the first tne money winners. Smith hung around fourth place in a quartet of the events, while Ghezzi was second to Revolta at Sacramento.

Revolta would have assumed the lead in actual money won in competition, but Thomson, although he failed to qualify for the 'Frisco match play event, won $125 in a driving contest preceding the tourney. His weekly average from January 7 to February 13 was $501.

Hogan Eleventh.

Charles Sheppard and Ben Hogan, like Demaret comparative newcomers to the big money circles, missed the first 10 by les sthan $100, both in the $700 circle with Ghezzi. Hogan, third at Sacramento and fifth at Oakland, earned $776.66 and Sheppard, who tied Jimmy Hines for second at Oakland, posted $725.

Big names were scattered at random through the list. Olin Dutra, former National Open champion, won only $267, Craig Wood a mere $175. Leonard Dodson only $40, Ky Laffoon, 130, and Dutch Harrison, the Florida sensation, disappointed with $390, with $285 of that in the Oakland tourney.

Cooper, who led the money winners of 1937 with $14,138.69, placed in all tournaments but without his Oakland victory he would have been near the bottom. His other five purses were $130, $75, $40, $25 and $8.34.

With Ralph Guldahl, Denny Shute, Gene Sarazen, Wiffy Cox, and others passing up the Western swing they will have to make it up in the Eastern tournaments to stand a chance to lead the winners for the year. The next event is the Crescent City open in New Orleans, starting Friday.

704 Set Rolled By Cafe Five

Pat's Cafe team, rolling in the Temple Major League, at the Temple alleys, rolled on of the first 700 team sets of the season last night against their rivals for second place, the Dixie Pig duckpinners.

Frank King's 147 gme followed Wesley, with Bub Guether with 136, Louie Jenkins 133, and Duke Doyle, 127, included in the record game.

Jim Falck set a new season's individual set record in the Navy Department men's league at Arcadia last night, totaling 416 for the three games. He also copped high game honors with 155 and his team high set with 1,712. Hydrographich accounted for high team game with 617.

Iowa Beats Wolverines

By the Associated Press.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 14.—Iowa dealt Michigan's Big Ten basketball championship hopes a severe blow tonight by handing the Wolverines, originally among the title favorites, their third defeat in seven games, 38 to 30.

An aggressive Iowa attack rolled up a 16-to-11 half-time lead and the Hawkeyes were strong enough to turn back a second-half Wolverine rally, which at one time pulled Michigan ahead, 22 to 21.

A free throw by Joe van Ysseldyk, Iowa reserve guard, tied the score, and a field goal by Ben Stephens, who shot six during the game, put the Hawks ahead to stay. Stephens and John Townsend, of Michigan, shared scoring honors with 15 points each.

Western Five And Tech to Clash Today

Tilt Set for 3:30 P. M.; Eastern Quint Also Battles Wilson.

By Jack Munhall.

Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown. Such is the position of Westerns defending interhigh basketball champions this afternoon as they face Tech in the opening half of a doubleheader in Tech gym.

This contest, crucial for Western, precedes an engagement between Eastern and Wilson. First game is at 3:30 o'clock.

Western, which won the title last season for the first time in years, now rests one-half game behind the pace-setting Easternmen and, although it does not figure to supplant them in the lead, today must win to remain in the race.

Eastern Has Won Seven.

Eastern has annexed seven of eight games, having dropped one on forfeit to Roosevelt, while Western has snatched six triumphs in seven starts. By disposing of Bruce Kessler's McKinley lads, who at present are anything but a soft touch, Western would shove the title issue squarely up to its contest with Eastern on February 23.

And, too, Western will be favored by the schedule, for it remains idle until that date, whereas Eastern meets Central. Central certainly has little chance to beat the Lincoln Parkers but there always is a possibility of such a form reversal as previous series history will show. Also the rest will enable Western to concentrate on the important game and workout a defense which will stop Eastern's deadly sharpshooters.

Tech, which only last week gave Eastern more than a passing scare by offering unexpectedly stiff opposition, is definitely the most improved team in the series and may bump off the Red Raiders. Bruce Kessler, in his first year at Tech, has done well with his material. The boys were green at first and the squad lacked a cool, dependable ball handler. Time and combat have remedied the first fault and the February acquisition of Sydney Schulman, a classy floor player has supplied the sparkplug.

Western's Hopes Lifted.

Right now Tech is a good match for any outfit in town, win or lose. Western's hopes for victory, however, were lifted with its impressive showing against Gonzaga in a recent game. The Raiders functioned smoothly and appear at peak of form. Also in that game, Bob Holloran came into his own as a point gatherer, scoring five baskets to lead the offense.

With Holloran ready to join Len Stanton and Bob Custer, a potent, towering pair of leather lungers, Western has a well-balanced attack, and is favored to take Tech by five to seven points.

A. G. O. Plays Archives Five

Former Is Favorite to Win League Title.

First-half action in the Government-Y Basketball League swings into its final round on the Central "Y" court tonight, with the strong A. G. O. tossers topheavy favorites to win first-place honors.

Victorious in all but one of their 10 games to date, the A. G. O. basketers figure to have little trouble disposing of the hapless National Archives tossers in their finale tonight at 7:10. The Archives quint has yet to record a win in 10 previous starts.

The second-place PWA quint, after setting the pace for eight straight weeks, faltered badly to drop their last two games and face still another tough assignment tonight when they meet Public Health at 8:20. State Department clashes with Interstate Commerce Commission at 9:30 to complete the card.

Cards Beat A.U., 32-22

reach 8-5, Wayne Ambrose and his scoring partner, Irish Carroll, began hitting the mark from long-range set positions.

As a result, the Eagles saw their lead changed into a 19-8 deficit at the half. They were working the ball into the basket, despite the tremendous resistance, but were unable to find the rim in the poorly lighted field house.

They opened the second half, however, as though they would catch the visitors. Hugo Schulze, former Western High ace, dropped in three goals and Dud Rogers only veteran on the team to start, inserted a double-decker, as did Emerson Bartlett. Walt Edwards inserted a free shot and the score was 21-19, C. U., as a result of a goal by Ambrose.

That was as far as it went, for the Cards had plenty of scoring fuel left and soon soared to a 31-19 lead, scoring eight points in rapid succession. After Ben Webb had scored the final A. U. goal, Pirro was pushed into the stage as he attempted to drop in a snowbird, creating an ending typical of the fray.

Singh Signed For Steinke

Hans Steinke, old German oak the boys have been cutting down with alarming regularity of late, and Ram Singh, of India, have been added to Thursday night's wrestling card at the Arena, rounding out a better-than-average line-up.

Singh defeated the last four opponents he met here, and is headed for top booking as soon as he bowls over a few more, but the venerable Dutchman may be a stumbling block. Steinke wrestled Danno O'Mahoney a couple of weeks ago and had a terrific struggle losing to him, giving rise to the opinion that he can give Singh the works whenever he decides to deviate from the script.

Meanwhile word has come by carrier pigeon from Bronko Nagurski, who wrestles Chief Chewacki in the feature bout, that under no circumstances must the Indian be disqualified. Chewacki has a habit of strangling opponents, and last week Referee Ben Bortnick disqualified him and awarded the honors to Dean Detton. Nagurski wants to handle the situation personally.

Detton, incidentally, is on the card, meeting Al Periera, and has been promised another bout with Nagurski if both win. Detton lost his title to Nagurski some months ago and failed to regain it in a return match. Now, however, he feels he's ready for another attempt and this one will be successful.

turned to Washington after the second game. Again they had made only five hits, with Hal Schumacher the opposing pitcher. With a six-run uprising against Al Crowder in the sixth inning, the Giants won the game, 6-1, took a 2-0 lead.

When the series moved to Washington for the third game, reliable Earl Whitehill called a halt to the Giants' successes. He held the Giants to five hits and, despite four errors by the Nats, scored a 4-0 shutout, besting the veteran Freddie Fitzsimmons.

Unluckiest pitcher in the series was Monte Weaver. In the fourth game he yielded a home run to Manager Bill Terry in the fourth inning, then pitched six of shut-out ball to lose in the eleventh, 2-1, in a duel with Hubbell. Luke Sewell had tied the score for Washington with a single in the seventh. A perfect bunt by Jackson, a sacrifice by Gus Mancuso and a hit by Blondy Ryan produced the winning run. Washington had men on first and second in its own half of the eleventh, with one out. Cliff Bolton was Cronin's choice as a pinch-hitter. A hot grounder to Blondy Ryan, a back-hand flip to Hughie Critz, a relay to Bill Terry at first, and it was a game-ending double-play that sealed the Giant's victory.

Into extra innings also went the fifth game. The Giants gained a 3-0 lead against Al Crowder. Then Fred Schulte wiped it out win a home run into the center field seats, with Manush and Cronin on base in the sixth inning. Relief men Jack Russell and Adolf Luque took charge of the pitching thereafter. And Luque was the winner, 4-3, in the tenth, because Mel Ott whacked a drive that tore through Fred Schulte's upstretched glove and settled into the center-field bleachers for a series-winning home run. On the wings of that homer vanished the possibilities of a sixth series game and the $50,000 it would have netted for Griffith's club treasury.

A.B.A. Manager To Be a Speaker At A.I.B. Dinner

Thirty-third Annual Event of the Institute to Be Held Saturday.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Dr. Harold Stonier, New York, executive manager American Bankers Association and national educational director, American Institute of Banking, will be a speaker at the thirty-third banquet of Washington Chapter of the Institute at the Willard Hotel, February 19. Dr. Stonier, a speaker of exceptional ability, has addressed local bankers on a number of occasions and the banquet committee expressed gratification that he has agreed to speak at the annual dinner.

Born in San Jose, Calif., he received his elementary and secondary education in the public schools of that State. He took his college work at the College of the Pacific and the University of Southern California, receiving his master's and doctor's degrees from the latter institution. He took graduate work at the University of California and Columbia University.

After leaving college Dr. Stonier went into high school and junior college teaching in his native State. After a period of teaching, he spent several years in the investment banking business in Los Angeles, specializing in the advertising end of the bond business. In 1920 he was instrumental in securing the underwriting for the College of Commerce and Business Administration of the University of Southern California and was associated for several years with its administration. In this connection he first became interested in the work of the American Institute of Banking and for a number of years helped supervise its courses in Los Angeles Chapter. Later he organized the extension work of the University of Southern California and the alumni association of that institution.

From 1923 to the close of 1927, he was actively associated and executively engaged in the general administrative work of the university, serving as its vice president. His interest in the advertising end of the investment business brought him in contact with organized advertising, and for a number of years he has been actively identified with that work. During 1926 he served as president of the Los Angeles Advertising Club and was later elected president of the Pacific Advertising Clus Association and vice president of the International Advertising Association. Dr. Stonier was appointed national educational director of the American Institute of Banking on November 1, 1927. On October 14, 1937, he was elected executive manager of the American Bankers Association and assumed the responsibilities of that office in addition to his institute duties.

Cotton Higher On Bill Hopes

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Cotton advanced a few points further into new high ground for the current movement today on prospects for Senate passage of the farm bill. May sold up from 8.87 to 8.91 and closed at 8.88, with final prices 7 to 12 points net higher.

The market opened 6 to 8 points higher. Demand was quite active but as prices advanced moderately, increased liquidation and some Southern selling developed. Except for spurts of activity, buying and selling orders were about evenly balanced.

Drop in Supply Keeps Wheat Prices Steady

Cold Wave Threatening Winter Wheat Area Is Another Factor.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Unfavorable conditions intensified by a cold wave threatening United States winter wheat territory Southwest did much to make Chicago wheat values average higher today. Contributing to wheat price upturns here was the fact that the United States wheat visible supply total showed a large decrease, 4,310,000 bushels, an amount more than double the decrease at this time last year.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅝ higher, compared with Friday's finish; May, 94⅝@94¾; July, 90⅝@90⅞. Corn, unchanged to ⅝ lower; May, 59¾@59⅞; July, 60⅝@60¾. Oats, ¾ down; rye, unchanged to ¼ off, and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to an advance of 2 cents.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance Moderately With Better Demand for Steel and Building Shares.

New York, Feb. 14.—If reports that the Government was about to veer a little further toward the inflationary side by taking more gold out of the sterilizing cabinet helped speculative trading, the United States bond market paid no heed. Prices were mostly higher, in spite of the request for higher relief appropriations and the agitation among the soft-money Congressmen for new ventures in price lifting and inflation.

Stocks held to their deal level of dullness, but prices were firm at the opening, no worse than irregular during the middle of the day, and firm again in the late dealings. Turnover was again well under half a million shares. Dollars were lower against sterling, but rose on francs. Commodity markets were mixed. May wheat closed unchanged at 94⅝ cents a bushel.

Fractional changes in stocks were the rule, but a few issues stood out. Steel, Chrysler and Telephone made good gains. Last prices were near the best levels reached in the first hour. Demand for Telephone was considerable as the approach of the dividend date reassured the market of an unchanged rate. The stock rose 2 points rather easily. A feature of the trading was a spurt in traction issues, an event of every three or four weeks, no matter what the news, for that maket makes its own news.

Building construction shares were somewhat uncertain, but some of them rose. Manville was strong. American Smelting, Philip Morris, Bethlehem and Standard Oil were good stocks. Cuba Co. lost half its market value on news of the bankruptcy proceedings. Cubt Railroad preferred attracted attention at the odd-lot post in rising on unusually large sales. Hiram Walker dipped 2 points. Shipbuilding shares were gently pushed ahead. Airplanes were neglected.

Guessing the Market.

Looking at the stock market through the glass of the chart followers, the movement of stocks "doesn't tell us anything." A period of milling around with little change in price and low sales volume, after a long bear movement, is regarded by some analysts to be a buying area which opens into a bull market. However, this sort of a market—dullness and price uncertainty—may last a long time, with false starts in both directions, and the market is too much saturated with political considerations for a great deal of reliance to be placed on ordinary economic factors.

One of the principal external influences at the moment is the armamentp roblem. Armament expenditures in this country seem certain to rise considerably and it might turn out that the United States will go forth to a battle for naval supremacy. In any event the rest of the world is likely to increase its military establishment greatly. The need of Japan and Great Britain, for example, for raw materials from this country is going to continue to support the metal markets.

On top of the base of rearmament expenditure in the United States, efforts to stimulate building construction for residential and industrial purposes, to say nothing of a revival of vast public works schemes to "make work," give hope to the business revivalists. In addition they have the prospect of Federal outlays merely for inflation's sake. Altogether the outlook for the speculative markets is by no means hopeless, even though current trade statistics show that business is still down and unlikely to rise quickly.

Trade Still Lags.

Illustrative of the supineness of business at the moment is the current operations in the steel industry. This week's rate, according to the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute, will rise to 31 per cent from 30.7 per cent of capacity last week. A month ago the rate was 29.8 per cent of capacity. Thus for a month the steel trade has been virtually at a standstill, and until the question of prices is answered new buying is unlikely to rise sharply. A year ago the steel mills were running at 81.6 per cent of capacity and still on the rise.

Cotton consumption in January rose slightly above the December rate, in total and on a daily basis, but the 434,740 bales consumed were nearly 36 per cent less than a year ago. Exports also fell more than 10 per cent from the same month of last year. Building contracts let last month, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation, fell 19.4 per cent from a year ago, most of the loss being in residential building which the Government is trying to stimulate.

Odd Lots.

The optimist is hard to down. In spite of the outlook for a reverse split in stock exchange memberships, which quite likely would involve an assessment on present seats, and notwithstanding the current extreme low volume of share turnover, someone paid $6,000 more for a seat today than the market commanded less than two weeks ago. Reducing the number of seats may be a bull point on membership values eventually, but in the process the existing membership surely will have to contribute something . . . It needs an optimist to describe this market as a "scramble to buy stocks." . . . The real omelette in Wall Street is made up of the eggs who can tell you just what the market is going to do next.

Stock Seat $65,000, Advance of $6,000

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for the sale of a New York Stock Exchange membership at $65,000, up $6,000 from the previous sale. The $59,000 sale last February 3 was the lowest paid for a stock exchange seat since 1918. Three week before, $75,000 was paid for an exchange membership, the top for this year.

Loans to Business Increase in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that bank loans for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes increased in the week ended February 9 for the first time since December 15.

Banks in 101 leading cities reported a net increase of $8,000,000 in these business loans. This type of credit increased $6,000,000 in New York City and $9,000,000 in the Chicago district, but declined in some other districts.

Steel Capacity Up 1,900,000 Tons

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—The steel industry's annual capacity for producing steel ingots increased nearly 1,900,000 gross tons last year to 71,065,540 tons, the first increase since 1934, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today.

Pig iron and ferro-alloys producing capacity was increased 1,100,000 gross tons to an annual total of 50,898,400 tons, the first increase since 1933.

The industry's capacity for producing Bessemer steel rose 115,000 tons to 6,440,000 gross tons of Bessemer ingots, the first gain over a preceding year since 1929. Both open hearth and electric furnace capacity likewise increase.

The capacity for producing steel ingots by the crucible process dwindled 2,000 tons to 3,580 tons annually.

Two Erie Trustees Appointed by Court

The Hadden appointment is subject to further consideration.

Detroit Firm Buys College Park Plant

Marking its first entry into the aviation field, the F. L. Jacobs Co., of Detroit, well-known automobile parts manufacturers, has acquired the W. I. T. Manufacturing Corporation, including its subsidiary, the Air-Track Manufacturing Corporation, of College Park, Md.

The transaction consisted of the exchange of stock on the basis of one share of the stock of the Jacobs Co. for one share of the W. I. T. Corporation, and was consummated at a joint meeting of the boards of directors in Washington yesterday.

The engineering facilities of the W. I. T. Corporation include the Washington Institute of Technology, composed of radio scientists formerly with the National Bureau of Standards. Air-Track, the radio safe landing system for aircraft, is the product of this group of radio engineers. In nine years of continuous experience in this field, they have obtained 30 fundamental and comprehensive patents and patents pending.

Surpasses 10-year Average by 12.1% and Previous Peak, 1931, by 6.2%.

New York, Feb. 14.—The United States in 1937 had the largest harvest in the history of the Nation, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The total output of all crops last year was 40.8 per cent greater than the previous year's harvest which was curtailed by a drought. Compared with the harvest in 1934, which was exceptionally small because of an even worse drought than in 1936 and because of the Government's crop restriction program, the harvest in 1937 showed an increase of 56.3 per cent.

Last year's harvest exceeded the previous record high production in 1931 by 6.2 per cent. It was 12.1 per cent larger than the average annual output in the ten-year pre-drought period, 1923-1932.

The bumper harvest in 1937 has assured an adequate food supply in 1938 since the size of the crop output in one year is the major determinant of the quantity which will be marketed the following year. The explanation of this is that many crops are not harvested until late in the year and food crops are chiefly marketed in the form of livestock which require time for raising.

The fact that the United States is now experiencing a severe industrial recession despite the largest crop output on record affords new evidence that a bumper harvest does not assure prosperity. It will be remembered that many business commentators last summer cited the prospect of large crops in 1937 as proof that a serious slump in business was practically an impossibility.

It is fortunate, however, that 1937 was a year of bountiful agricultural yields. While the large harvest did not prevent an economic depression, it will have a tendency to modify the extent to which the depression might otherwise go. A plentiful supply of food will mitigate the hardships of the depression's victims and it will prevent the development of a situation in which the present heavy load of taxation would have famine as an ally, a combination which, according to the testimony of history, would threaten a social upheaval of an unpleasant character.

Steel Operations Rise to 31 Per Cent

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 3 of a point to 31.0 per cent of capacity, compared with 30.7 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago the rate was 29.8 per cent of capacity, while a year ago it was 81.6 per cent.

Sheriff's Killer Hidden From Mob Threats

Man Trapped in Hills Taken to Jail at Harrisonburg.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 14.—George Pingley, 45-year-old sheepherder, was held incommunicado in Rockingham County Jail here tonight in the slaying yesterday of Sheriff J. William Newcome, of Frederick County, and severe wounding of State Policeman George Miller.

Pingley was trapped in a thicket in the hills near Winchester by an armed posse which was led to the killer's hiding place by his own shepherd dog.

Fearing mob violence would follow the killing of Sheriff Newcome, State police spirited Pingley through Woodstock, Va., where crowds had gathered at the jail, to Harrisonburg, 65 miles from the scene of the crime.

Commonwealth Attorney Burr P. Harrison, Winchester, said that Pingley complained of injuries to her head and nervousness.

State officers said the farmer admitted killing Sheriff Newcome but gave no reason.

Harrison said he would present first-degree murder charges against the mountaineer.

The sheriff was slain and the trooper wounded when they went to Pingley's home, near Mountain

Inquest Is Slated In Fatal Beating Of Md. Farmhand

A theory that Harry Janish, 45, farmhand, of Laurel, Md., was beaten to death, will be investigated by a coroner's jury at an inquest tonight before Justice of the Peace James S. Vawter, of Laurel.

Dr. Bryan P. Warren, of Laurel, who performed an autopsy yesterday, said the man had suffered a broken nose and bruises on his chin, upper lip and left ear. The injuries, he said, would not have been severe enough to cause death under ordinary circumstances.

Meanwhile, Prince Georges County police were holding William Thorpe, owner of the farm on which Janish was employed. There were no charges against Thorpe.

Janish's body was found about 11:30 Sunday night in the back yard of his dwelling.

Farmer Captured As Sheriff Killer

GEORGE PINGLEY.

SHERIFF J. WILLIAM NEWCOME.

6 Hurt as Guards And Strikers Fight

Gloversville, N. Y., Feb. 14 (A).—Six persons were injured tonight in a clash between deputy sheriffs and a crowd of demonstrators near the strike-closed Surpass Leather Co.'s plant here.

A crowd estimated by police between 800 and 1,000 gathered at the plant tonight and began throwing rocks at deputy sheriffs guarding the place. Police, using tear gas, drove the crowd away.

Paid President Is Approved by Broadcasters

National Group Votes Reorganization on a Regional Basis.

Plans for a thorough reorganization of the National Association of Broadcasters were approved yesterday by more than 300 leaders of the radio industry in conference at the Willard Hotel.

Under new by-laws approved yesterday, the association will be governed by 23 directors, 17 of them elected on a regional basis, and administered by a paid president named by the directors. The remainnig six directors will be elected at large.

Members of the association said yesterday the question of who would be president of the association was still "anybody's guess." The president's salary, to be fixed by the board, was expected to run close to $25,000 a year.

Through the evening the association members met by districts to name their representatives for the board of directors. They will be announced tomorrow. In turn, the 17 directors will nominate 12 more persons, 6 of whom will be elected to the board as members at large.

Earlier in the day, President Roosevelt told the association the broadcasting industry has "an important responsibility to see that this means of communication is made to serve the high purposes of a democracy."

In a letter read at the morning session, President Roosevelt termed radio a "national resource" which should "increasingly contribute toward our social as well as our economic advancement." His letter was addressed to Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, who spoke at the morning session, warned radio leaders to guard against monopoly that "might get a strangle hold" on the industry.

Senator Wheeler listed as monopolistic trends in radio high power protected over unlimited areas, concentration of ownership and network dictation to independently owned stations.

"Radio, he said, should afford equal facilities to those who are responsible and have something worth while to say, irrespective of the personal views of the licensee." He urged that the "doctrine of fair play" be followed in presenting over the air discussion of problems "important to the people."

Bob Burns Says—

A man can't have much pride in anything whether it's a friend or an automobile unless he has confidence in it. That's why a person should always get a guarantee with anything he buys.

Not long ago, Grandpa Snazzy bought himself a dollar watch. It was a pretty thing but what made him so proud of it was the big, yellow guarantee that went with it.

Not long ago we got up before daylight and went up to Mount Wilson to see the sun rise. When it started getting a little gray in the east, Grandpa turned to the old scientist and says, "What time is the sun supposed to rise this mornin'?" The scientist said, "6:24."

Grandpa looked at his watch and says, "Well, if it ain't over that hill in one minute and 16 seconds, she'll be late."

BENNY That Old Feeling. By J. Carver Pusey

Dr. McKenney, Retired Pastor, Expires at 92

Mrs. McKenney, who is 80, suffered a fractured hip January 22, when she fell in their home at 3315 Fourteenth street northeast. She has since been under care at Walter Reed Hospital.

Retired After 59 Years.

Prior to her fall, Mrs. McKenney had for several years attended her husband, who had been bedridden.

A native of Anne Arundel County, Md., Dr. McKenney first preached in St. Marys County, Md., as a "circuit rider." His pastorates in Washington included the Hamline, Dumbarton Avenue and Wesley Chapel churches.

He received his D. D. from the old Columbian College, now incorporated in George Washington University.

Retiring after 54 years in the ministry, Dr. McKenney served in recent years as a supply pastor for various Methodist churches and conducted men's Bible classes on the front porch of his home.

Funeral Tomorrow.

Dr. McKenney was a close friend of Gov. Alexander Shepherd, Washington's vigorous town-planner of the seventies, and the two often pored over Maj. l'Enfant's original design for the city.

Besides his wife, Dr. McKenney is survived by a son, Col. Harry McKenney, U. S. A., retired, three sisters and two grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. J. Martin Gillum at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in the chapel of Oak Hill Cemetery.

Death Comes Unexpectedly To Columnist O. O. McIntyre

Writer Who Gave Spirit of Gotham to Rural Areas Passes at 53.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 14.—O. O. McIntyre, whose newspaper column, "New York Day By Day" made his name a household word to millions of readers, died at 2 a. m. today in his Park avenue apartment. He was 53 years old.

Pending a medical examiner's report, the exact cause of death was not known. He had been ill only a few days.

The jaunty, trim-figured writer jotted down his last column in bed on Saturday, read the Sunday papers and made notes for his next column, and then retired with the mild complaint that he felt "a little rocky."

Seemed Exhausted.

"At the last, he seemed to become exhausted and just drifted off to sleep," said Charles B. Driscoll, long-time friend of McIntyre and editor of McNaught's Syndicate, which released the columnist's daily 800-word vignettes on the passing scene of New York to 508 newspapers from coast to coast and in Canada and Mexico.

Only his wife, the former Maybelle Hope Small, was at his bedside when he died. He had refused a doctor, saying he would soon be up and "feeling chirky" again. Mrs. McIntyre, his devoted companion since their marriage in 1908, said his last words were:

"Turn your face to me so I can see you."

Wed 30 Years.

They would have celebrated their thirtieth wedding anniversary, also his fifty-fourth birthday, on Friday.

Funeral services probably will be held Thursday at Gallipolis, the never-forgotten Ohio River town of his boyhood.

Often, in nostalgic paragraphs in his column, he said he was going to leave the metropolitan scene forever and return to Gallipolis, to the fine home called Gatewood, where he courted his wife and which he bought for her on their silver wedding anniversary.

O. O. McINTYRE.

He had upward of $1,000,000 when he died, accumulated from his $2,500-a-week syndicate salary and his magazine writings.

Started at $5 a Week.

In late years, his critics accused him of depicting an O.-Henryesque New York, a "Baghdad-on-the-Subway" scene, which no longer existed. But 7,000,000 to 15,000,000 daily readers apparently didn't think so.

Christened Oscar Odd, McIntyre started his "New York Day by Day" column in 1912 after ten years of apprenticeship starting as a $5-a-week reporter on the Gallipolis Daily News.

He gave the column away at first, sending out the smudgily printed strip to editors far and near, until at last the Bridgeport (Conn.) Post agreed to pay him the magnificent sum of $8 a year for it.

Charles Denby, Former Consul, Is Dead at 77

Resident of Capital for Last 20 Years Succumbs to Brief Illness.

Charles Denby, 77, former American consul general in Shanghai and Vienna, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital after a brief illness.

He was a brother of the late Edwin Denby, former Secretary of the Navy.

After graduation from Princeton in 1882, he served as Second Secretary of the Legation at Peking, China, at the time his father, Charles Denby, sr., was American Minister. After acting as First Secretary from 1893 to 1897, he was for three years engaged in private business in Tientsin.

During the Boxer Rebellion, Mr. Denby held the post of secretary-general in the provisional government established by the Allied Powers in China.

He acted as consul general in Shanghai from 1907 to 1909 and then for six years in the same capacity at Vienna.

After two years' association with the Hupp Motor Car Corporation in Detroit, he returned to Federal service in 1917. He was a member of the War Trade Board, and in 1918 he represented the State Department on a special mission to Japan and China.

Mr. Denby was a member of the board of directors of the Munsey Trust Co. He belonged to the Metropolitan and Chevy Chase Country Clubs.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Martha Orr Denby, and three sons, James Orr Denby, American consul in Capetown; Charles Denby, of Pittsburgh, and Edwin Orr Denby, of New York.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Capt. F. J. Bolduc Dies at 68 Near Glen Echo Home

Capt. Frederick J. Bolduc, 68, an Army officer retired after 30 years' service, fell dead in front of a grocery store in Glen Echo at 8:30 o'clock last night while walking from the postoffice to his home, three blocks distant. An hour and a half later Mrs. Bolduc had not been found and his body still lay on the sidewalk.

Capt. Bolduc was discovered by two girls, Inez Craft and Clare Deboe, who were emerging from the store. They notified clerks, who called Dr. Leo J. Donovan. Death was attributed to coronary thrombosis.

Capt. Bolduc was a member of Bethesda Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and Mrs. Bolduc was selling tickets for a benefit dance of the Chapel of the Little Flower when he died.

Born a French-Canadian, Capt. Bolduc was naturalized in 1917. He served in the Boxer Rebellion and was the seventh man to enter the breach in the wall at Peking. He served also in the A. E. F. during the World War, being gassed.

Sergt. Williams' Rites at 10 A. M.

Funeral serices for Police Sergt. Eslie Williams, 57, veteran traffic officer, will be at 10 a. m. today at the Church of Nativity, 6000 block Georgia avenue northwest. He will be buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Williams died Saturday night in Emergency Hospital of a throat infection. He failed to rally after five blood transfusions. He lived at 1510 Buchanan street northwest.

Col. Edward S. Starling, chief of the Secret Service, will head honorary pallbearers, which include Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, and his assistants.

Members of the Traffic Division will be active pallbearers and guard of honor. The active pallbearers will be Privates Leon D. Phelps, Jerome Tarleton, Richard Willey, John B. Singleton, Herbert B. Hebb and Lawrence A. Hartnett.

Maj. M. A. Coles, Attorney, Dies In Walter Reed

Rites Set Tomorrow for Officer Who Served on Pershing's Staff.

Maj. Malcolm A. Coles, Washington lawyer and once special assistant to Attorney General Wickersham, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital. He was about 65.

Born at Reedville, Va., Maj. Coles was graduated from Richmond College and from George Washington University Law School. He practiced law for a time at Heathsville, Va., served a term in the Virginia State Legislature and then came to Washington to enter the Government service. He was special assistant to the Attorney General during the Taft Administration.

At the outbreak of the World War he was commissioned a major and attached to the Judge Advocate General's office. Later he served overseas as an officer on Gen. Pershing's staff.

When he resigned from the Army in 1921, Maj. Coles was appointed a member of the Federal Trade Commission board of review. For the last few years he had been engaged in private practice.

Maj. Coles was a member of the National Press Club and of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity.

He leaves two sisters, Mrs. Heber L. Thornton and Mrs. William W. Lemmond, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at his home, 1645 Harvard street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Distillery Head Dies.

Rome, Feb. 14 (AP).—William J. Hume, 46, of Walkerville, Ontario, president of the Hiram Walker Distillery Co., died at his Rome hotel last night.

Peanuts Vendor At White House to Be Citizen at Last

When word got out yesterday that he had taken formal steps to become an American citizen, "Steve" Vasilakos, who sells peanuts near the White House, had to engage an assistant and finally issued a written statement to reporters and photographers, who almost mobbed his place of business.

"Well, I did not get a chance to take out my citizen papers before, but I have been just as good American citizen as if I were born here, if not better in some cases."

Steve lists among his customers several Presidents and more than a score of Cabinet members. When police drove Steve off the street because they considered his stand a menace to traffic, the late President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge interceded on his behalf.

David Sparks Held Here in Gem Case

David Sparks, 40, arrested in Miami several days ago in connection with the Eula Mae Bennett jewel theft case, was held for the grand jury under $7,500 bond yesterday, after Department of Justice agents brought him here.

He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on a charge of violating the national stolen property act.

Mrs. Bennett, 23, and Sparke were arrested here originally in 1935. At that time, $30,000 worth of jewelry was discovered in Mrs. Bennett's bags.

'Flying Fortresses' Set For Hop to Argentina

The War Department announced yesterday that six "flying fortresses" will leave Langley Field, Va., at noon today, en route to Miami, "official departure point" for their flight to Buenos Aires, Argentina, to attend the inauguration of Dr. Roberto M. Ortiz as president of Argentina on February 20.

The flight will be made down the west coast of South America with brief visits at Lima, Peru, and Santiago, Chile. Flight commander is Lieut. Col. Robert Olds.

Canines Quarantined To Halt Rabies Spread

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 14.—A quarantine within a radius of 10 miles of Clarksburg was put into effect today to combat rabies. The order was issued by Dr. Harvey C. Williams, this city, Harrison County veterinarian.

Dr. Williams said at least 15 persons have been bitten by rabid dogs within the last two weeks. A number of others, bitten by dogs which were not caught, have also arranged for Pasteur treatment, he said. The quarantine will remain in effect for at least six weeks.

Rites Set Today For Dr. E. P. Davis, Dean at Howard

Funeral services for Dr. Edward Porter Davis, 59, dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Howard University, will be held at 1 p. m. today in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel. The remains will be cremated and taken to Charleston, S. C.

Dr. Davis died Sunday at Freedmen's Hospital.

Born in Charleston, he received his B. A. from Howard in 1907 and his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago in 1923.

From 1913 to 1919 he held an appointment as associate professor of German at Howard. He served as a professor and head of the German department until 1929, when he was named dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Dr. Davis was a member of the Modern Language Association of America, the Goethe Society, the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History and the National Education Association. He was elected a fellow on the council of the American Geographical Society in 1936.

All university classes will be suspended this afternoon.

Greenbelt Has Buses, but Lacks A Road for Them

Greenbelt residents have a bus line to take them to their Washington jobs but now have no road.

So yesterday they petitioned Prince Georges County commissioners for a road over which buses might operate.

The petition brought about an argument between county officials and the Farm Security Administration over who was to repair the impasable road between Branchville and Greenbelt. The direct road has been washed out and a 5-mile detour is necessary in order to reach the model settlement.

County officials say the Government agreed to keep the stretch of highway in good repair when it took it over for heavy hauling. But since construction work is about completed, Farm Security Administration spokesmen say the Government has no further jurisdiction or authority to repair the road.

Residents of Greenbelt complain that because the direct route to Washington isn't being used, Capital Transit Co. buses aren't giving the community the service its charter calls for.

MAN, what a treat you're in for when you take your first straight drink of National's EAGLE! Of course, if you knew the pre-war whiskies, you know what to expect when we tell you that National's EAGLE is a 1938 model of the great pre-war American blends.

But if you don't . . . pour yourself two fingers of National's EAGLE in a hurry . . . for here's a drink with that mellow, exquisitely smooth, ALL-American taste that made the great pre-war blends so famous.

A rich pleasing individuality of taste that comes from the blending of matured, native-born American whiskies . . . in the old American way . . . by men who have spent a life-time in making great whiskies.

BUT, gentlemen, it's a great drink . . . a thoroughly American drink . . . made of American whiskey and velvet grain neutral spirits every drop of which has been distilled here in the U. S. A. in our own distilleries. Ask for National's EAGLE at the bar, club, restaurant or liquor store . . . in the decanter bottle!
